Maryland Couple Found Slain After 3-Day Search

Both Shot in Head; Bodies Battered; 3 Youths Held For Questioning

The severely bruised and battered bodies of a youthful Glen Burnie (Md.) couple, missing since Friday night, were found late yesterday afternoon 6 miles from Annapolis with a bullet hole in the temple of each.

Anne Arundel County police said a double murder had been committed in the violent deaths of John H. Mahlan, 25-year-old postal employe, and Miss Mary H. Kline, 18-year-old secretary, both of Glen Burnie.

Chief John H. Souers of the county police said he was acting on the premise that both the boy boy and girl were murdered while on a date Friday night.

"A Planned Murder"

"It was a planned murder," Chief Souers said. "The assailant knew what he was doing."

State's Attorney James C. Morton added there was every indication that it "was a sex crime," although verification will rest upon the autopsies.

The Chief said there were no suspects at the moment, although three young men were being held for questioning.

Chief Souers said that from inspection of the clearing he believed there had been "a fight at the scene." He theorized, from tracks in the grass, that the couple was brought to the clearing in a car. The Chief said there was no sign of a weapon, although the temple wounds indicated that a .38-calibre pistol may have been used.

The lower half of Miss Kline's bruised body was exposed, while Mahlan was completely clothed, police said.

Bodies Badly Battered

Chief Souers said both bodies, which were badly battered and bruised, were believed to have been taken to the spot in Mahlan's automobile, which was found abandoned Saturday, some 12 miles nearer Glen Burnie, near the town of Lipins Corners.

He said position of the bodies, about a car's width apart in a wooded area 100 feet from Chesterfield rd. and a half mile north of Defense hwy., Route 50, led to

Hurricane Due To Hit Miami This Morning

Miami, Fla., Sept. 20 (AP).—Hurricane flags fluttered along south Florida coasts tonight from Melbourne to Fort Myers as a severe tropical disturbance rolled into the Florida straits and headed toward Miami.

Hurricane warnings were ordered up north of Miami to Melbourne and north of the keys to Fort Myers, including the Lake Okeechobee region.

Northeast storm warnings were posted over southern Florida northward to the Daytona Beach-Tarpon Springs line.

The Weather Bureau said the hurricane was centered about east of Havana, moving north northeastward about 12 miles an hour.

It retained full hurricane force as it boiled across western Cuba and Havana reported a maximum of 80 miles per hour. Hurricane force winds cover a radius of about 50 miles around the center of the storm.

All indications point to continued north northeastward movement and the center should cross the Florida keys and move into the southern end of the peninsula late tonight, the advisory said.

The storm should reach the latitude of Miami about 9 or 10 a. m. Tuesday.

The first storm victim, the British freighter Lochmanor which ran aground near Little Cayman Island, apparently had ridden out the storm without a casualty. The skipper radioed that the 73 crewmen and passengers aboard were safe and a tug was standing by to lend assistance.

Campaign Kick-off:

Dewey Promises to Unite Nation, 'Unsnarl' Agencies

(Mr. Dewey's Text, Page 4)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 20.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey opened his campaign here tonight on an almost Rooseveltian national unity note.

He promised to "unite us as we have never been united before" to meet "maladjustments" at home and resist aggression abroad.

He pledged a foreign policy geared to "the firm belief that we can have peace."

And for Washington he promised "the biggest unraveling, unsnarling, untangling operation in our history."

Dewey faced a shrieking overflow crowd of 8000 in the Drake University field house. Some 10,000 more, turned away, listened to the speech through loudspeakers in the university stadium. Torrential rains through the afternoon forced cancellation of the scheduled outdoor rally.

All day he had ridden through Illinois and Iiwa, the first two States on his senatorial election "must" list. Coattail-riding Senate GOP candidates, something new in Republican politics, were picked up in transit and enjoyed the ride.

In Des Moines Governor Dewey drove around the stadium, greeting the overflow throng before he entered the packed field house.

There he received a two-minute standing demonstration. The crowd vociferously applauded his pledges of unity and hopes for peace, but seemed to like best his "operation Washington" promise. Boos mingled with cheers when he recalled the President's "red herring" attack on the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Pitched on the "rising above politics" level, yet making an indirect thrust at his opponent, Dewey spoke from the heights Roosevelt used to talk from. He spoke as though he already were President.

In a trackside park at Rock Island, Ill., he gave a preview of his Des Moines speech to a cheering crowd of 10,000. He put in a reelection plug for Senator C. Wayland Brooks, who rode with him from Englewood.

He tripped and then recovered in first referring to the Senator

District Plans Improvements At Gallinger

New Chief, Additional Equipment Cited in $4,352,404 Budget

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Plans to strengthen and consolidate administration of Gallinger Hospital were revealed yesterday by District Commissioner Guy Mason and Health Department officials.

They include congressional authority to hire a new chief of staff at the hospital to replace Dr. Percival S. Rossiter, whose salary is paid by George Washington and Georgetown Universities, and budget provisions to raise present salaries of other top men at Gallinger.

Dr. Rossiter, Commissioner Mason disclosed yesterday, has agreed to remain in his present position and the universities have agreed to continue his salary until the plans materialize. He had previously announced his intention to retire on September 1.

Plan to Raise Salaries

The plans to raise salaries of the top medical men, excepting that of the hospital superintendent, Dr. Alvin Sweeney, were contained in the hospital's budget request for the next fiscal year, made public today by District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler.

The budget requests $4,352,404 to operate the municipal hospital and its Upshur st. tuberculosis unit, or $746,904 more than required for present fiscal year's needs.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, said the extra money is needed to meet "absolute minimal" requirements of rising costs and needed expansion of hospital treatment facilities. The health officer also asked for $2,428,005 (not included in operating budget requests) for capital improvements at Gallinger.

More Money Sought

These include requests for an additional appropriation of $1,431,565 to complete construction of the proposed Pediatric and Crippled Childrens' Building; $383,000 more to equip that unit; $279,000 to complete the hospital's new laboratory building; $49,440 to equip that laboratory, and $285,000 to expand present operating facilities of the hospital.

Newest request made public in the hospital's budget requirements for the fiscal year beginning next July 1 was the sum of $285,000 to expand the hospital's operating facilities. The project would provide four more operating rooms and other surgery facilities by extending the two top floor wings of the surgery building.

A companion budget submitted by Dr. Ruhland for the District's Janitor Sits Glumly During Identification In Baltimore Court

Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 20.—His face grown shaggy with a beard, Eugene H. James sat glumly in Baltimore Criminal Court today as a child pointed him out as the slayer of 11-year-old Marsha Brill.

James

The 31-year-old janitor who is also charged with the June 27 murder of Carol Bardwell, 11, in Rock Creek Park in Washington showed absolutely no emotion in this first day of his trial.

He seemed hardly to be listening as the prosecution paraded 29 witnesses to the stand, most of them police officers whose testimony, the prosecution hopes, will make admissible a confession made by James to Baltimore police.

Among the first witnesses to testify was Barbara Sapperstein, 11, a playmate of Marsha Brill. She described how "a colored man with a knife" jumped from the bushes in the Baltimore suburbs July 6 and chased Marsha.

The attacker had a "tired" look, the child said. She was asked if she saw the man anywhere in the courtroom.

"That man," and she pointed to James sitting on a front bench, "looks something like him—although the man didn't have a beard."

The prisoner apparently has not shaved since his arrest more than two months ago.

Brother Supports Story

Charles H. Houston, prominent Washington attorney who is aiding in the defense, injected the Carol Bardwell case into the testimony, but only briefly and not by name.

While questioning Lieut. George G. Bryan of the Baltimore police homicide squad, Houston inquired if James had been questioned about a crime in Washington.

"He told us all about it," said Bryan.

The detective added that he knew Washington detectives had visited Baltimore and questioned James but that he had not met them personally.

After Barbara Sapperstein had retired from the stand, her 8-year-old brother, Alan, who was riding bicycles with the two girls in Baltimore's Pimlico section, was questioned and told substantially the same story that his sister had told.

The prosecution also introduced as a witness Mrs. Mae Ar-

Brass Rail Shootings Blamed On Policy Row as 2 Face Court

By Howard Dutkin
Post Reporter

Friction between Washington numbers mobsters led to the double shooting at the Brass Rail Restaurant, 1739 7th st. nw., last January Prosecutor Charles B. Murray told a District Court jury yesterday.

Murray asserted that Defendant Henry M. (Piggy) Leake, angered by a steady drop in his lottery business, was seeking out Roger W. (White Top) Simkins, whom he blamed for the decline. That's how Leake happened to hammer at the door of the cafe in the early morning hours of January 8.

Murray said Charles H. Nelson, night manager of the cafe, refused to let Leake in, explaining the place was closed for the night. It was following this, he related, that gunshots were exchanged, each wounding the other. Both are charged with assault with intent to kill and assault with a dangerous weapon.

The evidence will show, Murray told the jury of eight men and four women, that Leake stated to police and others, that "he had been operating a numbers book do-

Republicans Peril to West, Truman Says

Denver Audience Told GOP Victory Would Make Area 'Wall Street Colony'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Denver, Colo., Sept. 20.—President Truman said in this mile-high city in the Rockies today that a Republican victory would make the West "an economic colony of Wall Street."

"That's terrible even to contemplate," he said in a hoarse voice.

Mr. Truman mentioned Wall Street six times in a five-page speech. But his audience here in Denver, like that in Dexter, Iowa, on Saturday, did not appear to share his alarm.

Welcomed by 50,000

The reception of the speech, which might be described as polite, was in marked contrast to the rousing welcome that Denver gave Mr. Truman himself.

Fifty thousand persons turned out along flag-bedecked 16th st. They cheered the President lustily, doused him with confetti, and one woman gave him a kiss on the cheek. Between 25,000 and 30,000 gathered on the State Capitol lawn to hear his principal address.

In an off-the-cuff speech later, delivered before the Truman-Barkley Club in the Shirley-Savoy Hotel, Mr. Truman was much more effective.

For the first time since the campaign opened, he made a reference to the dump-Truman movement of preconvention days. Omitting any direct deference to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, whom his Democratic foes wanted as the party nominee, he said:

"You know, back in April of this year, they had your President out in the Atlantic Ocean so far as politics were concerned. And in May, we heard people deciding that it would be best for the country if certain other persons, many of whom you have in mind, could be named to head the Democratic ticket.

Difficulties Are Recalled

"And then, along in July, after the Republicans had had a convention and had written a platform—which, in my opinion, is the most hypocritical document that has been put in writing—people began to understand that for three long years the President of the United States had succeeded to an almost impossible situation."

He went on to say that the problems that arose just after World War II were much more difficult than those that had to be solved while the war was on.

His message to the Truman-Barkley Club was to get out a big vote. If this happened, he said, the members would not have to worry about "who will live in the White House for the next four years."

Mr. Truman came here to find that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, his Republican rival, was a favorite to get Colorado's six electoral votes this year, just as he did in '44.

The Denver Post, which has been conducting a State-wide poll published this result today: Dewey 45 per cent. Truman, 42 per cent. Wallace, 2 per cent. No opinion 11 per cent.

Eliminating the "no opinion" votes, the pollsters came up with these figures—Dewey, 52 per cent. Truman, 47 per cent, and Wallace, 3 per cent.

Political writers here said that Senator Edwin C. Johnson and

Mrs. Berman Refuses Answers In Atomic Espionage Probe

Post Reporter

On the grounds of self-incrimination, Mrs. Louise Branston Berman, wealthy blonde New York socialite, yesterday refused to answer questions in the current congressional investigation of atomic espionage.

Mrs. Berman, who has been named in previous House hearings as a key figure in the Communist atomic espionage ring, appeared in closed session before a House Subcommittee on Un-American Activities.

She had little to say to reporters after the hearings beyond a formal statement which she read to the subcommittee. The statement denied any "wrongful activities" and accused the committee of an "infamous act" in linking her name with its inquiry.

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) told reporters that in an hour and a half of questioning by himself and Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) Mrs. Berman relied on what she believed to be her constitutional immunity from answering questions on the ground such answers might tend to incriminate her.

She was accompanied by her attorney, Joseph Forer, who has represented a number of other witnesses who have been asked to tell of their Communist activities.

McDowell indicated, however, that her chapter in the investigation is not closed. He said the subpena for her appearance before the committee had been extended indefinitely, and she had been ordered not to leave the country.

McDowell told reporters that much testimony already has been given to the committee linking Mrs. Berman and her Communist associates to vigorous activity in behalf of the ring of espionage conspirators.

McDowell said that Mrs. Berman refused to say whether or not she knew Arthur Adams, who had previously been identified as a Canadian-educated Soviet agent.

Mrs. Berman identified herself as a housewife but refused to give the occupation of her husband, Lionel Berman, on the ground of possible self-incrimination.

In her formal statement she said in part:

"I have never engaged in any wrongful activity, and the attempt to create the impression that I have done so is in itself an infamous act. I deeply resent the slanders about me in the press, based on releases by the Thomas Committee. I feel that the purpose of the committee and of this hearing is to do me harm."

Mrs. Berman also said that she

West Confers on Breaking Off Moscow Talks; U.N. Assembly Opens Paris Meeting Today

Palestine, Berlin Chief Issues Facing Delegates; Evatt May Lead Session

Paris, Sept. 20 (AP).—The United Nations' General Assembly opens a fateful session Tuesday before a world worried over East-West tension in Berlin and unrest and assassinations in Palestine.

The issue of enforcing peace in the Holy Land—dramatically pointed up by the murder of Count Folke Bernadotte—stands high on the crowded calendar of the 58-nation "world parliament."

On the eve of the third annual session, there was a possibility that the Berlin blockade with its far-reaching complications in the East-West tug-of-war also would be thrown before the Assembly for full debate.

President Vincent Auriol of France will officially welcome the delegates Tuesday afternoon at the opening of the session, expected to run three months. The first major item of business will be selection of a president. Herbert V. Evatt, Australian deputy foreign minister, was among those prominently mentioned for the post.

To Pay Tribute to Bernadotte

Before taking up Bernadotte's proposal for enforcement of a Palestine peace, the U. N. will pay somber tribute to the slain Swedish count who was cut down by a volley of bullets in the Jewish section of Jerusalem while on duty as U. N. mediator.

The bodies of Bernadotte and French Col. Andre Serot—killed in the same ambush—are expected by plane at Orley Field in the morning. There, many of the world's top political leaders will gather to pay homage to a man of peace, murdered trying to halt a war with words.

The final 35,000-word report of the U. N. mediator said the savage Arab-Jewish war should be "pronounced formally ended." He said if the Arabs and Jews refuse to make peace, the U. N. should do so.

Marshall Silent on Arrival

Closely linked with the eruptive Palestine issue is Secretary-General Trygve Lie's plan to seek a U. N. police force of 1000 to 5000 men. He contends such a force would have "saved many lives, particularly in Indonesia and Palestine." Lie first made the proposal last summer at Harvard. Bernadotte's assassination spurred him on.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin declined to make statements on their arrival today. Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky told the Associated Press:

"I hope this conference will strengthen the peace. Personally

In Le May's Post

By The Associated Press

The Air Force shifted three important officers yesterday, putting a young wartime B-29 leader in command of the long range striking arm and sending the dean of its veteran generals to lead the Air University.

Lieut. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay, now commander of the U. S. Air Forces in Europe, takes over the Strategic Air Command—the long range outfit. Its headquarters, now at Andrews Field, Md., soon will be moved to Omaha, Nebr.

Gen. George C. Kenney, a veteran of air fighting in both World Wars, and head of the Strategic Air Command since it was established, in April, 1946, will take over the Air University, at Montgomery, Ala.

If Arabs, Jews Fail

Bernadotte's Final Report Calls on U. N. to Make Peace

Paris, Sept. 20 (AP).—A posthumous report by the murdered Count Folke Bernadotte declares the United Nations should step in to end the Palestine war if the Arabs and Jews fail to make peace.

The mediator wrote that "Israel" exists in Palestine," and the future of Arab Palestine should be left to the Arab states, "in full consultation with the Arab inhabitants" of the Holy Land.

His 35,000-word report was distributed to the 59 U. N. member states.

The Holy City of Jerusalem should be placed under United Nations control, the report said.

The report also recommended changes in the Palestine partition plan.

The Negeb desert of southern Palestine, he said, should become Arab territory. Most of it was given to the Jews under the partition plan.

All of Galilee should be "defined as Jewish territory," he added. The partition plan gave western Galilee to Arab Palestine, but it now is under control of the Israeli army.

Urges Free Port of Haifa

While Bernadotte left the disposition of Arab Palestine to the Arab states, he recommended that, "in view of the historical connection and common interests of Trans-Jordan and Palestine, there would be compelling reasons for merging" Arab Palestine and neighboring Trans-Jordan.

Bernadotte's report also recommended:

"The Jewish port of Haifa, including oil refineries and terminals, should be declared a free port.

The airport at Lydda should be declared a free airport.

The right of 360,000 Arab refugees to return to their homes in Jewish-controlled territory, or payment of compensation by Israel to those "choosing not to return."

The United Nations should provide special assurance that Jewish-Arab boundaries are "respected and maintained."

Urges Conciliation Commission

The political, economic, social and religious rights of all Arabs in Jewish territory and all Jews in Arab territory of Palestine "should be fully guaranteed and respected by the authorities."

Establishment of a United Nations conciliation commission.

The principal job of the conciliation commission would be to "supervise such boundaries, road, railroad, free port, free airport, minority rights and other arrange-

Abdullah Bars New Arab Rule From Palestine

Amman, Trans-Jordan, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Arab League announced today creation of an Arab government for Palestine. King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan promptly served notice he would bar it from the Holy Land.

Ahmed Hilmy Pasha, Arab military governor of Jerusalem, was named Premier of the new government.

The aged warrior, King Abdullah, informed the league he would not permit the new government to enter Palestine and named his Arab Legion commander in the old city as military governor to succeed Hilmy Pasha.

Abdullah saw in the creation of the new government an attempt by the Mufti of Jerusalem to carve out a base of power in Palestine. Reports have been heard here that the Mufti plans to return to Jerusalem at the head of an army of irregulars.

Jamal Husseini, a nephew of the Mufti, is slated to be Minister of the Interior in the projected Arab-Palestine government.

Husseini arrived here to seek Abdullah's support, but Abdullah announced his opposition after a palace conference with Husseini and Trans-Jordan officials.

With support of neighboring Iraq, Abdullah sent a message to the Arab League saying establishment of an Arab government in Palestine amounted to recognition of partition—which the Arabs have opposed from the start.

He said he would not permit formation of the government "within the security zone of the Trans-Jordan government, which extends from the Egyptian Kingdom's frontiers to the frontiers of Syria and Lebanon." This embraces the entire length of Palestine, including Israeli territory.

Lieut. Col. Abdulla Bey Tell, dashing young officer of Abdullah's Trans-Jordan Arab Legion, was named the new Arab military governor of Jerusalem.

Abdullah's message to the league recalled that Hilmy Pasha had advised him that the Arab

General Huebner Tells Troops In Germany, 'We Must Win'

Grafenwoehr, Germany, Sept. 20 (AP).—The commander of the American ground forces in Europe appealed today to his soldiers in Germany to extend their enlistments because of the grave international situation.

Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, in an address to about 15,000 First Division and constabulary troops who completed summer maneuvers here, said:

"I don't need to tell you how tense the world is today. I don't need to tell you how short our ranks are."

He asked the men to consider a new Army regulation authorizing extension of enlistments for six-months periods.

"We need you so much," he said.

In a later speech to officers, Gen. Huebner spoke again of the serious world situation. Without referring to war or mentioning the Soviet Union, he declared:

"We are going to win. We have to win. We are on the only side that defends the freedom of the individual."

Maj. Gen. Frank W. Milburn, commander of the First Division, joined his chief in appealing for reenlistments.

A discussion of the maneuvers by the officers was held. The officers praised the "generally fine performance" of the men but said they dwelled on spots where there was still room for improvement.

Marshall Meets Bevin, Schuman To Plan Strategy On Berlin Issue

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Sept. 20 (NYHT).—The Foreign Ministers of the United States, Great Britain and France conferred at the Quai D'Orsay for an hour tonight to decide whether to break off the Moscow talks and take the German issue to the United Nations.

When they left the meeting, it was disclosed that no conclusion had been reached. They plan to get together again on Tuesday.

Tonight's conference reflected the critical nature of the Berlin problem because it was the first time that the three Western Foreign Ministers had sat at the same table to examine the question.

Envoys Called From Moscow

Previously, they had coordinated their policies by means of a complicated procedure involving special communications arrangements with high-ranking representatives in Moscow, London and Berlin. This time they sat in the same room, examined similar reports and exchanged ideas.

It was announced they had summoned to Paris the men who have been negotiating in the field, and it was believed unlikely a decision would be made before they could be consulted in person.

The alternative to United Nations action which has been proposed by the United States is continued effort at Moscow with Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Minister, but at the last conference with him on Saturday there was little evidence of progress toward lifting the food blockade of Berlin.

Tonight's meeting was attended by George C. Marshall, American Secretary of State; Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Secretary, and Robert Schuman, French Foreign Minister.

Talks Last an Hour

The talks began soon after 6 p. m. and ended about 7 p. m., with no one prepared to say whether a decision had been reached. On the surface it appeared that the American Government was more anxious to present the case to the United Nations than either the British or the French.

What difference of opinion there is, however, looked like one of tactics, for it was obvious during the day that all three states have had just about enough of the inconclusive Moscow negotiations which opened July 29 and have been continuing ever since, with daily doubt as to whether an understanding was possible.

Some weeks ago the four powers agreed in principle that the Russians should raise the food blockade of Berlin and that the United States, Great Britain and France should accept the Soviet mark as

Meat Price Drop Seen by Packers In 30 to 60 Days

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Meat prices should be somewhat lower in 30 to 60 days, meat packers said today. Some thought they might be down as much as 40 per cent.

The drop will be a seasonal one, but may well be the beginning of a downward trend, in the opinion of some packers here for the forty-third annual meeting of the American Meat Institute.

F. W. Specht, president of Armour & Co., said in an interview that consumers should not expect freer supply and lower prices immediately as a result of the record corn crop. He said the corn has to be harvested, converted to feed, and then fed to the animals.

"The corn crop will be felt in hogs in the spring, but it will be next fall before you'll see the results in cattle," Specht said.

One industry spokesman said many in the industry think the peak of meat prices has passed, but others are more cautious. At any rate, one said, the decline should carry through the spring.

Bulldog 'Beetle' Smith Hasn't Yielded Inch, As U. S. Ambassador, to Master of Kremlin

When the powers that be decided, early in 1946, to send a tough guy to Moscow as the American Ambassador, they reached into the Army and picked out Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith.

"Beetle" Smith is a tough guy, all right. Besides, he has an ulcer and a temper to go with it. He is a tough guy with a lot of sense, and a sense of humor.

Hot war, cold war, "Beetle" always seems to be in a hot spot. During the campaigns in Africa, Italy and Europe, "Beetle" Smith was chief of staff to Gen. Ike Eisenhower, and as such, something of a general manager or vice president in charge of operations. He was, then, in the middle of everything. Now, too, he's in the middle.

Fact is, the more "Beetle" changes, as he did from soldier to diplomat, the more he runs into the same old routine.

Berlin was the target in the hot war; it's the focal point of the cold war. One of the "Beetle's" multifarious tasks during the war was to fly stateside every so often and report back to the boss, Gen. George Marshall, Chief of Staff. Today Ambassador Smith will fly to Paris from Moscow to report on the current war of nerves to his present boss, Secretary of State George Marshall.

A "Bulldog," Says Churchill

It was Prime Minister Churchill who most succinctly sized up the square-jawed, dimple-chinned, broad-shouldered Hoosier. "Bulldog" was Churchill's summation of General Smith. Britain's war leader was an open admirer of "Beetle's" tenacity, in tearing into a problem, in solving it, in following through.

"Beetle" Smith rose to top-brass position the hard way. He had neither West Point nor college background. He went to work out of high school but joined the National Guard at the age of 15. He was sent to officers' training school in 1917, was commissioned a second lieutenant, went overseas, and was wounded in France.

The Indianapolis youth liked Army life, stayed in after the war. He studied hard to make up his lack of education, read omniverously to gain background. Until 1941, "Beetle's" progress was slow but dogged. In the next four years he zoomed from major to lieutenant general.

Developed Mortar Use

"Beetle" Smith is credited with developing a successful mortar fire system, which he "sold" to superiors by teaching a ranking general's chauffeur how to fire the weapon effectively in five minutes. He also helped to sell the jeep.

But Gen. "Beetle" Smith's contribution to the war effort was his genius as chief of staff to Ike, who called him "one of the great chiefs of staff of all times."

It was Ike who made the decisions. It was "Beetle" who mastered the million details, assembled the information for his chief, and once the decisions were made, saw to it that they were carried out.

"Beetle" was a tough guy in action, although as Harry Butcher has reported in his diary, "delightfully informal" off duty. His gastric ulcer sometimes played hob with him, and those were particularly difficult days for his men. He suffered from the haunting fear that if he submitted to treatment, the doctors would "rule book" him out of the war. Once, he had to undergo a blood transfusion, and on returning announced blithely that his batteries had been recharged, and that, therefore, he was now ready to electrify the world.

At 52, neither the bulldoggedness nor the ulcer of "Beetle" Smith has shown signs of easing up. For two years now he has stood firm against Kremlin threats and blandishments, and while it may be true that Stalin hasn't given an inch, neither has "Beetle."

50 More Held In Bernadotte Assassin Hunt

Tel Aviv, Sept. 20 (NYHT).—Israeli military and civil police seized 50 more terrorist suspects today and army headquarters disclosed that from 275 to 300 persons have been apprehended since Friday in the search for the assassins of Count Folke Bernadotte.

Twenty of the arrests were made in Jerusalem and army search squads penetrated the village of Abu Gosh where a small band of Arab Stern gang members had lived. Other Sternists who have fled underground were routed out of private homes.

Bolstered by the most drastic emergency decree ever issued, the Israeli army served an ultimatum today to the Irgun Zvai Leumi military battalion in Jerusalem to disband within 24 hours. The ultimatum contained the threat of criminal prosecution of Irgun leaders if they refused to accede.

Army headquarters refused to comment on an unofficial report that two of the four gunmen who murdered the mediator had been apprehended.

The emergency regulation for the prevention of terrorism, adopted yesterday, gives the Israeli army a powerful weapon for the destruction of dissident elements. A three-man military court will be established to mete out punishment to any Israeli citizen connected in any fashion with a terrorist organization.

U. S. Consul General In Jerusalem Guarded

Jerusalem, Sept. 20 (AP).—A purported threat against United States Consul General John Joseph MacDonald of St. Louis, Mo., prompted fresh security precautions at the consulate today.

The consulate said it had received word Saturday — the day after the assassination of Count Folke Bernadotte—that the remark "MacDonald is next on the list" had been overheard in a conversation of six uniformed men.

Jews, Arabs Renew Fighting in Holy City

Jerusalem, Sept. 20 (AP).—Jews and Arabs hammered each other with mortars and machineguns for four hours in Jerusalem last night. Each blamed the other for starting it.

The fighting, which gave Jerusalem one of its most spectacular shows of the war, broke a three-night period of peace.

U. N. Assembly Meets Today

I am an optimist. I have never been a pessimist."

Other items on the Assembly 59-item calendar included such issues as atomic energy, Greece, Korea and the Italian colonies—all of them involving basic differences between Russia and the Western powers.

The Security Council met today and decided to wait before taking any action on Hyderabad. The princely state had asked the Council to intervene after an invasion by Indian troops. The Nizam of Hyderabad surrendered after a 109-hour war, but his representative said today he was awaiting instructions. India demanded that the case be dropped immediately.

Bernadotte's Report to U. N.

ments as may be decided upon by the United Nations."

Placing Jerusalem under United Nations control would, in effect, internationalize it. Bernadotte proposed this international area be the same as originally proposed by the United Nations partition plan. He would also grant "maximum feasible local autonomy for its Arab and Jewish communities, with full safeguards for the protection of the holy places and sites and free access to them, and for religious freedom."

"The right of unimpeded access to Jerusalem, by road, rail or air, should be fully respected by all parties," Bernadotte added.

Bernadotte said he recommended changes in the partition plan boundaries "in order to make them more equitable, workable and consistent with existing realities in Palestine."

Boundary Recommendations

His major boundary recommendations were:

"The area known as the Negeb, south of a line running from the sea near Majdal east southeast to Faluja (both of which places would be in Arab territory), should be defined as Arab territory.

"The frontier should run from Faluja north northeast to Ramleh and Lydda (both of which places would be in Arab territory), the frontier at Lydda then following the line established in the General Assembly resolution of 29 November (the partition resolution).

"Galilee should be defined as Jewish territory."

Bernadotte said: "International responsibility should be expressed where desirable and necessary in the form of international guarantees, as a means of allaying existing fears, and particularly with regard to boundaries and human rights."

Cites Plight of Refugees

Fixing of the Jewish-Arab frontiers, "in the absence of agreement between Arabs and Jews," should be done by the United Nations, he declared. The U.N. should create a technical boundaries commission to deal with the subject, he added.

Bernadotte's proposed conciliation commission would deal with population exchanges "with a view to eliminating troublesome minority problems and on the basis of adequate compensation for property owned."

Reporting on the 360,000 Arab and 7000 Jewish refugees, Bernadotte declared: "I must emphasize again the desperate urgency of this problem.

"The choice is between saving the lives of many thousands of people now or permitting them to die."

"Large numbers of these are infants, children, pregnant women and nursing mothers. Their condition is one of destitution and they are 'vulnerable groups' in the medical and social sense."

He pointed out the Arab refugees were not citizens of Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Syria or Trans-Jordan, which are providing many of them "the basic necessities of life." They look, he added, to the United Nations for assistance.

The present disaster relief program is temporary, he said, and "quite inadequate to meet any continuing need."

On return to their homes, Bernadotte continued, the refugees are entitled to "adequate safeguards."

He declared he believed responsibility for refugees relief should be assumed by the United Nations, along the neighboring Arab states and the Israeli government.

"For the international community to accept its share of responsibility for the refugees of Palestine is one of the minimum conditions for the success of its efforts to bring peace to that land," Bernadotte said.

Reports Deaths of Observers

In reporting on the work of his truce observers, Bernadotte said: "It is with deep regret that I must record" the deaths of four members of the observers staff. The killings of Bernadotte and Serot since has raised the death toll to six.

"The truce is not an end in itself," Bernadotte reported. "Its purpose is to prepare the way for a peaceful settlment."

Bernadotte recommended that "the existing indefinite truce should be superseded by a formal peace, or at the minimum an armistice."

Such an armistice, he added, would "involve either complete withdrawal and demobilization of armed forces or their wise separation by creation of broad demilitarized zones under United Nations supervision."

Abdullah Proscribes League

League had approved the new government.

"Trans-Jordan's delegate has denied this," said Abdullah.

"In any case, formation of such a government in our opinion would turn Palestine back to the disturbed situation prevailing before May 15.

"As the Arab Legion is now fighting alone in Jerusalem where hostilities are still in force in spite of the truce, and as this central front, including Ramallah, is under authority of the Arab Legion and the situation is still confused, we cannot allow any other hands to interfere in the responsibility of our military government, especially those who are anxious to rule Palestine."

He addressed a message also to Hilmy Pasha, saying "the souls of Arab Legion soldiers killed during the struggle protest at this spoiling of the future of the country they fought for."

Chinese General Yields to Reds at Shantung Capital

Nanking (Tuesday), Sept. 21 (AP). The government reported today the commander of its Eighty-fourth Division defending the long-besieged capital of Shantung Province had surrendered to the Chinese Communists.

In a special communique, the Defense Ministry said Gen. Wu Ha-Wen and 2000 of his troops defending Tsinan had capitulated. The ministry added, however, this development does not affect the situation at Tsinan.

Only yesterday, Governor Wang Yao-Wu, commanding the defense of the city of more than 500,000, asked the central government in Nanking for help. Wang said the Reds were subjecting Tsinan to heavy artillery fire.

The defenders were preparing for street fighting.

Rebels Repulsed At Burma Refinery

Rangoon, Burma, Sept. 20 (AP).—Insurgents attacked the Burma Oil Co., petroleum refinery works at Syriam Sunday. The raiders were repulsed with heavy casualties.

A government communique said more than 100 rebels were killed and 15 captured during another battle near a village in the Sandoway district on the Arakan coast.

Oil Sabotage Charged to 6 In Hungary

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 20 (U.P.). The ministry of interior today announced the arrest of six top officials of the Hungarian-American Oil Co. on charges of sabotaging Hungarian oil production.

Two of the officials, Paul Ruedemann, president of the company, and George Bennentine, vice president, also were Budapest representatives of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, the ministry said.

It alleged the six men confessed receiving "politically motivated orders to reduce Hungarian oil production" from their American employers.

The ministry did not mention the officials' nationality.

[A Vienna report said Ruedemann and Bennentine are Americans. U. S. Legation officials who tried to intercede when the men were arrested Saturday night were forced away at gun point, reliable sources said.]

The ministry claimed Ruedemann and Bennentine confessed receiving orders from three directors of the Standard Oil production department identified as "Eastbrook, Bolton and McCollum."

the sole currency in the former German capital.

The agreement provided, however, that the mark should be subject to quadripartite control, and efforts to determine how this control should be exercised have led only to discord.

This prompted Secretary Marshall to propose international action, but both London and Paris have been inclined to evade a step which will lead to public debate with little likelihood of a solution. Yet another futile Kremlin gathering would make this move a certainty.

In any case the Moscow talks are off for the time being. The three Western negotiators, General Walter Bedell Smith, American Ambassador; Frank Roberts, special British envoy, and Yves Chataigneau, French Ambassador, are expected to leave Moscow Tuesday for conferences with their Foreign Ministers in Paris.

American Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas arrived here from London and attended the Quai D'Orsay meeting with Secretary Marshall. Gen. Sir. Brian Robertson, British military governor of Germany, came in during the morning and assisted Mr. Bevin. Other arrivals were Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, and his political adviser, Ambassador Robert D. Murphy.

The Western experts are gathering. Mr. Molotov, however, apparently intends to stay in Moscow leaving leadership of the Soviet delegation to Tuesday's opening of the United Nations General Assembly to his deputy, Andrei I. Vishinsky.

Also with Secretary Marshall this evening were John Foster Dulles, of the American delegation; Jefferson Caffery, American Ambassador to France, and Charles E. Bohlen, counselor of the State Department. In addition to General Robertson, Mr. Bevin brought with him Sir William Strang of the Foreign Office and Sir Oliver Harvey, British Ambassador in Paris. Mr. Schuman was assisted by Jean Chauvel, secretary general of the French Foreign Office, and Maurice Couve de Murville, secretary general in charge of political affairs.

Reds Turn Berlin City Regime Into Soviet Weapon, Foes Say

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP).—The anti-Communist Berlin City Council charged the Russians tonight with transforming the city administration in the Soviet sector of Berlin into an instrument of Soviet power.

The council, meeting in the safety of the western sector of the city, approved a resolution saying all important city posts in the Soviet sector have been filled by members of the Communist-controlled Socialist Unity Party (sed).

"The government and administration system in all districts of the Soviet sector have thus become merely an instrument of the Soviet occupation power," the resolution declared.

It said most of the elected representatives have been dismissed illegally and "actual work of the administration is made impossible."

The American-licensed German news agency Dena speculated that the Russians may make a "squeeze play" to get custody of Berlin anti-Communist leaders.

Dena predicted the Russians would demand that the leaders be turned over to them for punishment in return for reducing 25-year sentences imposed on five Berlin youths last week.

Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov ordered the Soviet military tribunal, which sentenced the boys after an anti-Communist outburst here September 9, to review the case.

The severity of the sentences caused great resentment among anti-Communists.

Dena said the Russians want to get custody of speakers at an anti-Communist rally that preceded the clash between the crowd and Russian soldiers and Soviet-controlled police.

These would include such leading anti-Communists as Socialists Frank Neumann, Ernst Reuter, Otto Suhr and others.

Sweden Denies Moscow Story of Pact With U. S.

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 20 (U.P.). A foreign office spokesman today denied a Radio Moscow report that the United States and Sweden had concluded a defense pact.

The report was disseminated by the Soviet news agency Tass and broadcast last night.

French Reds Put Squeeze On Queuille

Paris, Sept 20 (AP).—French Communists put the squeeze on Premier Queuille's coalition government tonight by coming out in favor of local elections.

The Communists' action jolted the National Assembly. Queuille's middle-of-the-road cabinet already is under pressure from the threat of inflation and labor demands for increased wages.

Meanwhile, labor unrest hit the gas and electric industries, largely because of a government decision to cut 10,000 workers from the nationalized industries' 100,000-man payroll.

The local elections for half of France's 3023 general councilors were scheduled for mid-October. Several weeks ago the Assembly voted, with the Communists abstaining, to postpone the balloting.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Rightist Rally of the French People, was particularly caustic in criticizing the Socialists and Popular Republicans for pushing through the postponement. De Gaulle's party won the 1947 local elections and the general has made repeated demands for a parliamentary election. At the time of the postponement, it generally was assumed that the Communists did not want the local elections held either.

Most observers thought today's Communist maneuver was designed not only to embarrass Queuille but also to force the Socialists and Popular Republicans to the polls just after they had voted a series of unpopular new taxes.

3 Nations Protest

Albania Aids Greek Rebels, West Charges

The United States, Britain and France have accused Albania directly of supporting Greek guerilla forces in their civil war against the Athens government.

The State Department said a joint protest by the three Western powers was delivered to the Albanian government last week by the French minister in Tirana.

France is the only one of the three powers which has granted diplomatic recognition to Communist-controlled Albania.

The protest dismissed as a subterfuge the Albanian government's claim to have disarmed and interned "a certain number of Greek partisans" who retreated from Greece into Albania.

On the basis of recent observations by a special United Nations Balkan committee, the three powers said, it is "perfectly clear" that Albania has not disclosed the full number of Greek guerillas who entered her territory.

The protest said there must have been "at least 5000" partisans who escaped capture by the Greek regular army by fleeing to Albania.

It also asserted that many of the partisans reentered Greece from Albania and made attacks from Albanian territory against Greek government forces.

The three powers said they regarded Albania's support of the Greek guerillas as a violation of international law.

There was no indication of what further action, if any, the three powers contemplate.

Stikker Hints Dutch Overture To Indonesia

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Foreign Minister Derk Stikker of the Netherlands yesterday described the Communist revolt in Java as part of a coordinated strategy hatched in "eastern Europe" and using Moscow-trained natives as its tools.

He drew a sharp distinction, however, between the Communist movement and the present government of the semi-independent Republic of Indonesia, which has denounced the Communists as public enemies.

"There is a definite split between nationalism and communism," Stikker said at a press conference just before flying back to his post at The Hague.

Echoes U. S. View

In this he was echoing an opinion he may have heard in his talks of the last few days with Secretary Marshall and other American officials. In the American view, one of the best ways to fight communism in southeast Asia is to persuade nationalist leaders there that communism and independence do not mix.

Recent "Voice of America" broadcasts to Indonesia have emphasized that the Cominform has found Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia guilty, among other things, of "nationalism." A State Department spokesman said last Friday that nationalism in Communist-controlled states is regarded by the Cominform as "a high crime and grounds for ruthless interference in the internal affairs of such states by international Communist organizations."

Overture Seen

Yesterday Stikker not only stressed the same theme, but made what sounded like an overture to Mohammad Hatta, Premier of the Indonesian Republic and leader of the present fight against the Communists. He said the Netherlands government would "certainly make another effort to arrive at a solution" with the government of the Republic.

The Netherlands government still is committed to setting up a United States of Indonesia, with full self-government under the Netherlands crown. Negotiations collapsed when the Dutch started what they called a "police action" in Java in July, 1947.

Negotiations Stalled

A three-man "Committee of Good Offices" sent by the United Nations succeeded in negotiating a truce and stopping the fighting. Further negotiations for a political settlement have been stalled for several weeks, with no new proposal coming forward from either side.

"I have not come here to discuss a new 'police action,'" Stikker said. "We want a solution with all the constructive elements in the republic. If Hatta would be willing to make an arrangement, the Netherlands would be willing to meet him and support him.

"We want a solution, but not by concessions that would strengthen the Communists."

Asked whether the Hatta government had asked for Netherlands help against its Communists, Stikker answered, "Not yet." He thought Hatta's government had enough arms "at present" to fight the Communists, but declined to answer what he called a "hypothetical" question on what would happen if the Communists succeeded in taking over the republic.

Stikker said there was "definite contract" between the Communist movements in Malaya and Indonesia, and repeatedly pointed to the Moscow-trained background of most of the Indonesian Communist leaders.

Batavia, Java, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Communists called tonight for the complete overthrow of the Indonesian government and brought the young republic to the brink of civil war.

Quickly following up the weekend coup at Madioen, Moscow-trained Communist Leader Musso broadcast a demand for a revolution encompassing the entire republic. The Madioen radio station of his new "peoples republic" said the present government of President Soerkarno must be destroyed as soon as possible.

The Communists are supported by the Socialists and Laborities.

A parliament committee gave Soerkarno unlimited powers to cope with the crisis. The Indonesian news agency Antara said mass arrests were carried out in the capital city of Jogjakarta in lightning moves to stamp out spread of the uprisings.

The Madioen radio outlined a program that also included confiscation of all industrial enterprises by the government, placing of military force in the hands of the people and setting up of internal security committees.

The program followed the usual Communist pattern. The slogan was "land for those who till it."

[At The Hague, Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, lieutenant governor-general of the Netherland East Indies, suddenly cut short his conferences in the Dutch capital and announced plans to leave for Batavia tomorrow to deal with the situation].

The radio at Madioen, where the Communists overthrew the government Saturday, broadcast speeches accusing Soerkarno and Premier Mohamed Hatta of being traitors and "selling the country to the imperialists."

Mrs. Berman Keeps Counsel

comes of a family of California pioneers and has been "fortunate in having considerable financial means which have given me a heightened sense of social responsibility."

During the Hollywood hearings last fall, Mrs. Berman was identified by Louis J. Russell, a committee investigator, as "what would be termed in a confidence game as the sharper or loader. That is, in Communist Party circles she directs the manner in which contacts with certain people are to be made."

Russell said the witness had contacts "in numerous Government agencies."

Russell said Mrs. Berman was the beneficiary of a $500,000 trust fund upon the death of her father in 1929. He related that in 1944 she loaned $50,000 to a West Coast Communist publication.

Kasenkina Hearing Put Off

Shortly after its session with Mrs. Berman, the committee announced postponement of plans for subcommittee questioning of Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina in New York Wednesday.

Mrs. Kasenkina is the Russian school teacher who jumped from a New York consulate window to escape Soviet efforts to send her back to Russia. She is recovering in a hospital from injuries suffered in the jump. The interview was put off at the request of her doctor who said Mrs. Kasenkina had developed a fever and could not be questioned "for at least a week or 10 days."

Another witness the committee plans to call this week is Rear Admiral Jack Duncan, retired, who was naval attache in Moscow under Ambassador W. H. Standley in 1942 and 1943.

The committee plans to ask Duncan for further details on volunteered testimony by Standley that President Roosevelt sometimes used the Navy code to send diplomatic messages to Moscow because he feared the diplomatic code was not secure.

Tightened Regulations

In his testimony before the committee former Assistant Secretary of State Adolph Berle testified that after hearing from Whittaker Chambers, $30,000-a-year Time magazine editor, that Alger Hiss, former policy-making State Department official, was a member of an "elite" group of Communists in Government, he tightened up on code and security regulations all along the line.

Meanwhile on the other side of the Capitol, the Senate Investigating Subcommittee under Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) scheduled two days of hearings for next Monday and Tuesday on an entirely different issue concerning communism.

Air Commands Reshuffled

chief of the Air Training Command and a veteran of the air war in Europe and the Mediterranean, will succeed Lemay in Europe.

The transfers will take place over a period of several weeks. The Air Force did not announce a successor to Cannon and it did not say what assignment will be given Maj. Gen. Robert W. Harper, present head of the Air University.

Interpretations of the move varied with the people questioned, but it was agreed that each of the three is well qualified for his new assignment.

General Kenney, 59, stocky, wiry haired, hard-talking leader of the big bombing command, has the broadest war experience of any active general in the Air Force today. He shot down two enemy planes in the First World War, has headed production at Wright Field, served as foreign observer, graduated from the top military schools, and for three years commanded the air offensive in the Southwest Pacific under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Some observers say that Kenney's new assignment is simply a move to put the oldest veteran of air combat in charge of the top school for senior Air Force officers being trained for the future. Others say that it is evident the younger officers in the Air Force are taking over in line with the selection of Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg for Chief of Staff.

General Lemay, who is 41, has an outstanding combat reputation. After leading bombardment units and developing new tactics in the European theater, he was sent to the Pacific to take charge of America's then newest and mightiest weapon, the B-29 Superfortress. He also has served with the air materiel command and directed important air force research and development.

General Cannon, who is 56, joined the Air Corps in 1920 and has held a number of major assignments. He ended the war as leader of all Allied air forces in the Mediterranean theater and served as commanding general of U. S. Air Forces in Europe for a year before returning to this country in April 1946.

All three have a permanent rank of major general and none of them is a graduate of West Point.

Yank Farewell To Korea Waits Ruling by U.N.

Withdrawal of American troops from southern Korea will have to await a decision of the United Nations General Assembly in Paris, the State Department said yesterday.

On Sunday, Russia announced that Soviet troops would be pulled out of northern Korea by January 1, and invited the United States to follow suit in the American, or southern zone. Yesterday the State Department replied, in effect, "not now."

The American statement recalled, however, that the U. N. Assembly last year called for establishment of an all-Korean government; that a U. N. commission supervise free elections in southern Korea, and that the Soviet government refused even to let the commission enter the Soviet-controlled area in the north.

"One Facet to Entire Question"

"Had the Soviet Union cooperated in carrying out the provisions of the Assembly resolution," the State Department said, "the question of troop withdrawal would doubtless have been already resolved.

"The United States Government regards the question of withdrawal of occupying forces as but one facet of the entire question of the unity of Korea."

The U. N. commisison is expected to report to the Paris Assembly on the legality and representative character of the new Korea government, set up in the southern half of the country. American forces already have turned over many of the functions of government to the new Korean authorities, and the number of American occupying troops has been greatly reduced.

Reds Trained Big Force

More important than the number of American or Soviet troops in Korea is the creation of local Korean armies, north and south. The Russians long ago trained and equipped a Korean constabulary in the north, believed to amount to 200,000 men.

In recent months, the United States has set up, trained and equipped a much smaller Korean "security force" in southern Korea. Maj. Gen. John R. Hodge, until recently the American commander, estimated on his return to Washington last month that this force consisted of about 25,000 men.

However, it has been reported growing rapidly in size and in efficiency, and some American authorities feel it is already able to cope with any disorder short of a mass invasion backed by Soviet troops.

Bolling Field GI Asks Divorce From Soviet Wife

Easton, Pa., Sept. 20 (AP).—Charging indignities, an American Army sergeant today filed a divorce action against his Russian wife who charged he "had been forbidden to write to her because she was a Soviet citizen."

Tech. Sergt. William V. Phillips of nearby Argyl said in his suit he married Antonia Tarasova in Moscow, December 6, 1946. She still lives in the Russian capital.

Phillips, on leave from his post at Bolling Field, Watshington, D. C., had no comemt on his divorce action. It was filed in Northampton County Court.

India Hints Hyderabad Election

New Delhi, India, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—India indicated today it will press for elections in conquered Hyderabad state to determine whether Hyderabad should join the Indian Commonwealth.

Home Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel in a statement to correspondents said: "The future of Hyderabad will be decided by the will of the people."

But first, he added, "normal conditions must be restored. Our first concern is the establishment of law and order."

Patel issued the statement as 10,000 Indian troops marched into Secunderabad, adjoining Hyderabad City. A United Press dispatch from Hyderabad said Secunderabad and the capital were "quiet."

(In Paris, Hyderabad's representative to the United Nations, Nawab Moin Nawaz Jung, suggested in the Security Council that Hyderabad's complaint against India be postponed until he receives specific instructions from the Nizam, ruler of the princely state.

There was little question but that any election in Hyderabad would result in a Hindu victory and, presumably, the overthrow of the Moslem Nizam, who has refused to cede to the Indian union. About 80 per cent of Hyderabad's 17-million population is Hindu.

3 Top Communists Get Week Stay of Trial

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—A Federal judge today denied a motion by three top-ranking Communists, indicted on conspiracy charges, for a month's extension in which to attack the constitutionality of their indictment.

However, Federal Judge Edward A. Conger granted a week's extension until October 4 "on condition that this in no way is to affect the trial date, October 15."

The extensions were sought by John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker; William Z. Foster, national chairman of the Communist Party, and Eugene Dennis, national secretary.

British to Refit Part Of Reserve Fleet

Devonport, England, Sept. 20 (AP).—The British navy is getting ready to put some of its reserve fleet back into commission, it was disclosed today.

An admiralty order issued to the royal dockyards here gives high priority to the refitting of the reserve vessels. Officials declined to say how many ships might be affected.

Foes of Tito Set Up Front In Bulgaria

Belgrade, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Communist newspaper Borba said today a small group of renegades escaped to Sofia and set up a Yugoslav front organization opposing Premier Marshal Tito. They applied to Bulgaria for recognition.

Borba said the "spurious" organization, headed by Macedonian students, broke into headquarters of the real front organ and seized records. The article termed this a part of the "new wave of slanders" deepening the split between Tito and other countries in the Russian sphere.

The gulf has been widening steadily since the cominform denounced Tito and Yugoslav Communists as heretics from the Marxist line.

State Department Ponders New Imru Incident Protest

The State Department said yesterday it would consider a new protest filed by the Ethiopian Minister to his treatment during a science meeting at Constitution Hall last week.

The Minister, Ras Imru, was asked to move from a box to a seat in the orchestra. Rather than move, Imru walked out.

The State Department said Friday, in an apology, that "color" had nothing to do with the switch. It explained that the Minister had an orchestra ticket but was sitting in a box.

The legation said yesterday that Imru had four tickets to the box and was first checked and seated by an usher.

A State Department spokesman said yesterday the department's earlier information came from the American Association for the Advancement of Science which conducted the meeting and handled the seating arrangements.

Estonia Refugees Reach N. Carolina After 70-Day Trip

Wilmington, N. C., Sept. 20 (AP).—Sixty-nine refugees, including 13 children, arrived here this afternoon. Their 79-foot schooner, flying the Estonian flag, crossed the Atlantic in 70 days.

The refugees first touched the United States mainland at nearby Southport this morning

They were the second group of refugees to touch at Southport recently. Fifteen Estonians who landed aboard a 37-foot sloop August 17 are on Ellis Island awaiting action by immigration officials who said they had no passports.

The refugees included 31 men, 25 women and 13 children.

Truman Approves $103 Million for 213 Combat Planes

President Truman has approved expenditure of an additional 103 million dollars for combat planes in the current fiscal year, the Air Force said yesterday.

The funds will pay for 13 Boeing B-50C Superforts, 100 Lockheed F-80C Shooting Star jet fighters and 100 Republic F-84C Thunderjet fighters.

The 103 million dollars was part of Air Force procurement funds the President held back from congressional appropriations last spring.

Defense Secretary James Forrestal has recommended to Mr. Truman the release of 96 million dollars more, the remaining unallocated portion of Air Force funds.

The latter funds would be spent for 10 B-47 6-jet bombers, which have been reported to have a speed of about 600 miles an hour, guided missiles, training planes and helicopters.

Western Europe Bread Grains Harvest Up 37%

Western Europe's 1948 harvest of bread grains will be 37 per cent above last year and 88 per cent of the 1935-39 average, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

Good crops predicted in earlier forecasts, it said, are generally being realized. Although frequent August rains made harvesting difficult at times, they favored the development of late crops and pasture.

New Civil Air Wing Headed By Tyrrell

Lieut. Col. Melvin E. Tyrrell, 5403 19th ave., Avondale Terrace, Hyattsville, Md., has been named commanding officer of the newly formed National Capital Wing of the Civil Air Patrol.

Lt. Col. Tyrell

A native Washingtonian, Colonel Tyrrell is a member of the Washington Board of Trade and has served as chairman of the board's subcommittee on airport facilities and its subcommittee on Skyway One.

During World War II, he was in charge of producing aeronautical charts for the Commerce Department. He now is president of Aeronautical Services, Inc., 1366 Irving st. nw.

Named as deputy under Colonel Tyrrell is Major Joseph C. Bergling, 1938 Quincy st. ne., oldest ranking Civil Air Patrol member in this area.

House Group Leaves For European Study

Five Congressmen left by plane yesterday for a five-week study of conditions in Europe. In the group were Representatives Burleson, Gossett, Wilson and Lucas, Texas Democrats, and Battle (D., Ala.)

Burleson said they plan to attend the Moral Rearmanent Conference now being held in Switzerland. After that they hope to visit every European country not dominated by Russia, and want particularly to check up on the Berlin situation and results of the Economic Cooperation Administration program abroad.

2 Weeks Proclaimed

In two separate proclamations, Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg set aside the week of September 26 to October 3 as Religious Education Week, and the week of October 3 to 9 as Fire Prevention Week.

Deweys' Opening Speech

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 20 (AP). Following is the text of an address by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey at Drake Stadium tonight:

TONIGHT we enter upon a campaign to unite America. On January 20, we will enter upon a new era. We propose to install in Washington an administration which has faith in the American people, a warm understanding of their needs and the competence to meet them. We will rediscover the essential unity of our people and the spiritual strength which makes our country great. We will begin to move forward again shoulder to shoulder toward an even greater America and a better life for every American, in a nation working effectively for the peace of the world.

This is my pledge to my fellow citizens, the declaration of the principles and purposes of your next administration:

I pledge to you that as President, every act of mine will be determined by the one principle above all others: Is this good for our country?

I pledge to you that my administration will be made up of men and women devoted to that same principle—of men and women whose love of their country comes ahead of every other consideration. They will know how to translate their devotion to our country into constructive action.

I pledge to you a foreign policy based upon the firm belief that we can have peace. That policy will be made effective by men and women who really understand the nature of the threat to peace and who have the vigor, the knowledge and the experience required to wage peace successfully.

I pledge to you a Government of teamwork. The executive heads of your Government will be really qualified for their positions and they will be given full responsibility to do their job without loose talk, factional quarreling or appeals to group prejudice. They will know how to work together as a team and one of the most important members of that team will be the distinguished Governor of California, the next Vice President of the United States, Earl Warren.

I pledge to you an administration which will know how to work with the elected representatives of the people in the Congress, an administration that wants to work with them and will do so. The unity we need for the Nation will be practiced in the Nation's Capitol.

I PLEDGE to you that on next January 20 there will begin in Washington the biggest unravelling, unsnarling, untangling operation in our Nation's history.

I pledge to you an administration which knows in its mind and believes in its heart that every American is dependent upon every other American; that no segment of our people can prosper without the prosperity of all; that in truth we must all go forward together.

This is what you may expect from your next, your Republican administration. It will be an administration in which every member is enlisted to advance the well-being of all our people and is dedicated to the release of the enthusiasm, the energy, the enterprise of our people; an administration which has faith in America and is resolved to prove its faith by its works.

This is the road on which I propose that we set out together. As we advance we will carry America's destiny with us. We will also carry the hope of freedom and the living promise to a stricken world that men can be free and that free men can live in peace.

We are living in sorely troubled times. The unhappy difficulties of today are familiar to every one of us. Three years after the end of the war the world has still not found peace. As we wage the peace, we face problems as momentous as any which have ever confronted any nation in peace or war.

Our sons and daughters—the young people in our grade schools, our high schools and colleges have lived their whole lives in a troubled world. Their plans for education, for getting married—for getting ahead, are delayed and disrupted. Against the dangers of a sorely troubled world they are being called upon to keep America strong.

The housewife who has been out shopping today to buy meat for her family and clothes for her children has been up against the hard fact of high prices. Every married veteran living in a Quonset hut or doubled up with his family is up against the cruel fact that we do not have enough good homes for our people. Every family living in a crowded unsanitary, cold-water tenement has the same urgent needs. Hard-working, frugal Americans find they do not make enough to lay anything by for a rainy day or sickness or unemployment or old age.

Millions of Americans, too, face the intolerable fact that because of their race or their color or the way they choose to worship God, they are denied rights which are their birthright and which, by American principle and law, are their just due.

THESE are some of the difficulties that confront us. It will not be easy to meet them, and I want no one to think that I believe it will be easy. These times require the cooperation of evey one of us and the highest order of devotion and intense labor by your Government. But it is part of my faith in America to believe that with restoration of faith in ourselves, of competence in our Government, of unity of purpose among us there is nothing as a people we cannot do.

I deeply believe that an administration which can unite our people will have taken the greatest single step toward solving these problems. This is our most urgent need.

Every four years under our Constitution it is our right as Americans to hear a full and thoughtful discussion of the issues profore us. As this campaign progresses I shall place before you my views concerning every aspect of the grave problems at home and abroad and the steps by which I propose that we meet them.

I will not contend that all our difficulties today have been brought about by the present National Administration. Some of these unhappy conditions are the result of circumstances beyond the control of any government. Any fair-minded person would agree that others are merely the result of the Administration's lack of judgment, or of faith in our people. Only part are deliberately caused for political purposes. It is not too important how these conditions came about. The important thing is that as Americans we turn our faces forward and set about curing them with stout purpose and a full heart. We can enlarge the opportunities of all our people and move toward peace with all the world.

And to all those in this country or abroad who hate freedom as well as to all our friends everywhere who love freedom and look to us for aid and leadership let me make this clear: So far as I am concerned—so far as the Republican Party is concerned, this campaign will not create divisions among our people. Instead it will unite us as we have never been united before to build our Nation so strongly that no force will again attack us and to labor unceasingly to find common grounds of firm and peaceful agreement with all nations.

AS WE chart our course for the years ahead, we must find the stars by which to sail. We must look to the fundamentals of our country. They are easy to find. Our America is not the lucky product of a rich continent discovered by a sea-faring adventurer looking for a pot of gold. The roots of our country are not material. They are moral and spiritual. Of course we are deeply concerned about things to live with. But we are also concerned about the values by which we live. You and I know that we can surmount our unhappy times by a restoration of our ideals and faith in our country.

We know that because we are Americans. It is no accident that our country stands like a beacon of hope to all the world. Our magnificent America is the end result of the deep convictions of a great people devoted above

THIS TEST REVEALED NO THROAT IRRITATION DUE TO SMOKING CAMELS!

In a recent test, hundreds of men and women all across the country smoked Camels—and only Camels—an average of one to two packages a day—for 30 consecutive days. Each week their throats were examined by noted throat specialists—a total of 2470 examinations—and they found not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels.

Republican Candidate Expounds Philosophy and Aims

everything else to faith in their God and the liberty and precious importance of every human being.

We believe in freedom for our neighbors across the street or across the seas—the same freedom we expect for ourselves. We believe in honesty, loyalty, fair play, concern for our neighbors, the innate ability of men to achieve; these convictions, arched over by our faith in God, are the inner meaning of the American way of life. That is why the eyes of freedom-loving people everywhere in this troubled world are turned with hope to us. That is our America for which we can not and will not fail.

But we are in a world and in a time when these convictions are doubted and sneered at and denied. The priceless rights of freedom of speech, of assembly, of religion, of the press, academic freedom, the fundamental freedom of choice of occupation, even of the right to own a car or a home or a farm—all these are denied to many millions of regimented people throughout the world. The ideals and the rights we hold to be good are held to be evil in those countries. No other fact about our world is of such ominous importance.

We live in a world in which tyranny is on the march. The evil idea is on the march that man is not destined to be free but to be enslaved. That idea is backed by a mobilization of enormous force. Millions of families who have known freedom are in fear of evil, unfamiliar footsteps and at every moment they expect the knock on the door. Millions who still enjoy freedom live in fear that today or tomorrow some crisis will be seized upon to blot out their freedom too.

MILLIONS of human beings, it may be tens of millions—no one knows—are being starved and worked to death in concentration camps and at slave labor. And yet, at this very moment, the promise of America and the truth of what America believes are being vindicated. The oppressed peoples of these lands know there is a better life. They know there is a better way.

The truth about America seeps through every obstacle of iron and steel. In millions of hearts the hope that is America is flaming. That is why we in America have such a solemn obligation to love and cherish all of the freedoms we enjoy. We are the last, best hope of earth. Neither barbed wire nor bayonet have been able to suppress the will of men and women to cross from tyranny to freedom.

Let us call up some of them as witnesses. Let them testify. Call up Jan Masaryk of Czechoslovakia, the heroic son of a heroic father. We may never know whether he took his life or was murdered. We do know this, that however it came, he preferred death to a life cut off from freedom. Jan Masaryk is our witness.

Call up Archbishop Stepinac, who lie stoday in a Communist prison, a living martyr to the cause of freedom of religion. Call up Nicola Petkov, the executed leader of the free forces of Bulgaria. Call up General Bor-Komorowski and Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, the great exiled leader of Poland who gladly brushed elbows with death to escape from tyranny. All these are our witnesses.

Call up the athletes who came out from behind the Iron Curtain to compete in the Olympics only last month and refused to return. Call up Oksana Kasenkina, the Russian school teacher. She was picked by the secret police to come to our country to teach the children of Soviet diplomats. She could not even understand the language of America but in her heart she came to understand America. When she jumped to death or freedom from the window of her diplomatic prison, she gave her testimony. That was the day—the very same tragic day—that the American people were told that the exposure of communism in our own Government is a "red herring."

With mankind as our witness this is no time for doubting the rightness of free government. This is a time—above all times—for a great American affirmation. Our faith reaffirmed holds our destiny and the hope of the world.

As we look around us we can count our blessings and be humbly proud and happy we are Americans.

Our fathers came from an old world in which few men knew the meaning of liberty. Yet they dared to found a Nation and stake its future on their belief in what men could do if only they were free. The America of today is the living, towering symbol of the eternal rightness of that faith.

We have sometimes failed in our faith and often fallen short of it, but in our hearts we believe and know that every man has some of the divine in him, that every single individual is of priceless importance and that free men against whatever odds have an unbeatable quality. That faith is my faith. It is the faith of our people. It is the faith in which we will go forward.

Never let anyone tell you that America's unfinished job is too big. Never let anyone tell you that we can meet our problems only by surrendering to the methods of the police state. The free system is the only system on earth which can make a mistake and cure it. It is the only one where opportunity always exists to improve. It is the only system where men can freely change their governments by peaceful means. This land of ours almost alone in all the world, is still the pace where youth—where every young man and every young woman—is free to plan for the future and make their dreams come true.

AS A nation we are troubled today by many things and we must remove many fears. We are troubled by high prices and we must end the maladjustments which cause them. We need more homes for our people. We must widen the opportunities for our youth. We must increase the security of our older people. We must protect our enterprise system from monopoly while encouraging free and fuller production for the benefit of all our citizens. We must and we will maintain prices so our farmers can go ahead confidently with full production of the food our growing Nation needs. We must and we will preserve the gains of labor so that its confidence and production will grow and flourish. We must work against intolerance and bigotry, against racial and religious discrimination.

Above all be must confidently face the immense labor of making peace in this world and act wisely and with courage to achieve it.

As I make specific proposals dealing with these problems of ours in the course of this campaign, they will not be the product of wishful thinking. I have no trick answers and no easy solution. I will not offer one solution to one group and another to another group.

The American people have a right to expect honest answers and I propose to give them. The specific proposals I will make will not be born of fear. They will come from my own deep faith in America. They will not set faction against faction, group against group. They will aim to join us together in a more perfect union.

As we go on from here together, we will know that our advance is carrying us into unexplored territory—on into the atomic age. Man has, at last, begun to tap the powers of the universe. We can do much to see that this new age is not one of catastrophe, but one of unimagined promise and opportunities. For such a future let us summon new wisdom, new courage and a new vision. Let us say, as one people: we welcome the challenge of tomorrow.

Let us go forward into this future as courageous, united Americans, bound together by an invincible faith that liberty with justice under God is the most precious thing on earth.

as "Governor Brooks." On the uptake he said he had "the fondest hopes of working in close cooperation with your Senator, 'Curley' Brooks.'"

The rain poured down in sheets en route west from Chicago, but stopped just before Dewey's arrival in Rock Island.

Dewey laughingly recalled that Governor Warren had the same experience on his first campaign lap and said "maybe we have a team of rainmakers."

Dewey said it rained 19 of his 20 days stumping Oregon in the primaries and "perhaps it's a good omen."

Then he tried out some of the best lines in his Des Moines "unity" speech on the Rock Island audience.

He used this Illinois community of farmers and farm implement makers to illustrate his point that every element in our society is dependent on another and "our job is unity."

After years of Government "wobbling" he said he is going to "bring a new kind of administration to Washington."

Again he promised to give Washington "the biggest, toughest, most successful unsnarling housecleaning any government ever got."

Taking his first indirect poke at the President, he stole another crack from his prepared Des Moines speech. He said he, Dewey, happens to be "one of those who don't believe exposure of communism is a 'red herring.'"

Proposes Latin Partnership

On a Chicago track siding a delegation from the Inter-American Council of Commerce and Production, led by Angel Borghi of Argentina, came aboard.

To the Latin-American leaders he also talked "unity"; carried Cordell Hull's "good-neighbor" policy one step further.

Just as Western Hemisphere nations worked as "partners" in fighting totalitarianism in World War II, Dewey said they should progress side by side in the years to come "not simply as good neighbors but as full partners."

Spotlighting his support of the Senate Republican nominee in each State, Governor Dewey took aboard Senator George Wilson and a large Iowa delegation at Davenport.

To more than 5000 persons at the Davenport depot he gave Senator Wilson a hand in an unscheduled rear platform talk.

Here again he hammered at his unity theme and promised a foreign policy that will neither "wobble to the left nor to the right but will go straight forward in a direction all the world can understand."

Praising Iowa for adding to the Nation's record corn crop, Dewey said it will not only help grain-shy Europe but will be fed here to hogs "so we can start bringing down the price of meat."

As Governor Dewey crossed President Truman's trail there was no recognition that Mr. Truman had passed this way two days before.

His Des Moines speeches likewise ignored the President's attack on Republican farm policies at nearby Dexter's national plowing contest Saturday.

But there was this ironical sidelight: meeting Governor Dewey at the Des Moines depot, Mayor Heck Ross presented him with the "Order of the Golden Plow."

In Iowa's State capital tonight, Governor Dewey looked forward, skipping the traditional brawls over "the record," to the "challenge of tomorrow."

Like his running mate, Governor Warren, he was just short of nonpartisan in discussing the Nation's "difficulties."

He said many of them were beyond the control of any government and certainly the Administration did not precipitate all of them.

He got in his snickersnee indirectly by saying only part of our "troubles" were caused by Administration "lack of judgment" or deliberately brought about for political purposes. He didn't specify which.

Doesn't Name Russia

Nor did he mention Russia or her satellites by name when he spoke of "tyranny on the march" in the world, with the evil idea that man is not destined to be free.

He said neither barbed wire nor bayonet can suppress the will to freedom, that even now "the truth about America seeps through every obstacle of iron and steel."

As imaginary witnesses he called to the stand Czechoslovakia's late Jan Masaryk, Archbishop Stepinac, Bulgaria's Nicola Petkov, Poland's General Bor-Komorowski and Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, and the Russian schoolteacher, Oksana Kasenkina.

Here Dewey aimed another backhand slap at the President. On the very day Miss Kasenkina jumped from a window of the Soviet consulate he said the American people were told that the exposure of communism in our Government was a "red herring."

There was an indirect jab at Henry Wallace and his Progressive Party, too, when he said the Republican campaign will strive for a united America and not create divisions among our people."

As President, he said every act will be determined by one principle: "Is this good for our country?"

If the Nation expected a farm speech, it got only one remark from Dewey on that subject here. It was a repetition of his Albany pledge to maintain support prices "so our farmers can go ahead confidently with full production of the food our growing Nation needs."

Similarly, he touched only lightly on the "hard fact of high prices" as a sore problem for our housewives, and the housing shortage, forcing married veterans to double up.

He said these and other problems "will not be easy to meet," but with intense cooperation by all, restored faith and "competence in our Government" they can be met.

The greatest single step toward a solution, and the most urgently needed, is "an Administration which can unite our people," he said.

Does Stomach Gas and Bloat Make You Feel Miserable?

If so, here is how you may get blessed relief in freeing your stomach from this nervous distress. It works this way:

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Warren Returns Truman's 'Herring'

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 20 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren tossed the "red herring" back at President Truman tonight. He labelled the President's "give-them-hell" statement a "belligerent generalization" of a chaotic and desperate Administration.

Coming into predominantly Democratic Oklahoma, the Republican vice presidential candidate said he was bidding for the support of Democratic voters in the interest of "American unity . . . that this Nation so desperately needs."

"Certainly," Warren declared, "no progress will ever be made by hurling invectives at any individual or group, either at the Republicans, or at the despairing Democrats who agreed with them instead of their own party Administration."

Administration a "Shambles"

Warren at the outset jumped on to Mr. Truman's remark, made as he set out on his campaign for re-election, that "I am going to give them hell."

Reading the "record" of the Eightieth Congress, Warren charged that Mr. Truman's own party followers—as well as Republicans—presumably must be included as "targets of this anger, this threat."

"Such a threat can prove only one thing," Warren said. "That is, that the incumbent Administration is a shambles; that it is dispirited, chaotic, quarrelsome and desperate."

"And," he continued, "after all is said and done on this subject, it has been my experience that people who start out with the publicly avowed purpose to give somebody hell, are usually the first ones to cry 'red herring' when something amiss is discovered in their own back yard.

Truman Tells of GOP Peril

Gov. W. Lee Knous, both Democrats, would run ahead of the Truman-Barkley ticket, and probably would be elected. Both are very popular in the State.

President Truman's hoarseness was very noticeable when he delivered his principal speech today in front of the State Capitol.

The condition developed on Saturday when he ran into clouds of dust at Dexter, and made a total of 14 speeches before the day was over.

Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, the White House physician, wanted to spray Mr. Truman's throat this afternoon, but was balked. The President said he was sure he would recover without treatment.

Graham said he was not alarmed.

As always seems to be the case when he reads from a manuscript, Mr. Truman was not at his best today. A bright sun, blazing down from a cloudless sky, was in his eyes, and he kept his head down over the text from beginning to end.

His theme here in the "Rocky Mountains empire" was that this region would suffer heavily if the Republicans take over the White House and hold on to Congress in November.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, his GOP rival for the Presidency, is coming to Denver tomorrow and will have an opportunity to answer him.

Mr. Truman said that the "notorious, do-nothing" Eightieth Congress tried to cut the ground from under the Administration's conservation program, but was partially blocked by the Democrats.

He charged also that the Republicans, as soon as they took over on Capitol Hill, began to "tear down" the whole Western development program—funds for great dams, irrigation projects and power systems.

"The most reactionary elements in the country today are backing the Republican Party in its efforts to take over your Government on election day," Mr. Truman said.

"If they succeed, I predict that they will try to turn back the clock to the day when the West was an economic colony of Wall Street."

This brought no reaction from the crowd.

There was some applause, however, when he warned against a checking of the West's progress and said:

"Your need is to insure the election of an Administration pledged to give you that aid and support. In other words you need a Democratic Administration."

A moment later he began hammering again at Wall Street, saying:

"We shall have to fight the millions of dollars that Wall Street is pouring into the treasury of the Republican Party.

"We shall have to fight the Republican undercover sabotage of the West."

He said that the Democratic Party was eager for the fight, and, in an interpolation, drew applause by saying, "In fact, I'm taking it to them right now."

Tonight the President was greeted at Colorado Springs by Mayor James N. McCullough and a crowd estimated at about 8000.

Many cried "No" when he asked if they intended to "turn the clock back again."

He said the Reclamation Act had been on the books 30 years but not much was done about it until 1932 when "you elected Franklin D. Roosevelt." He said in 1932 the income of Colorado was $300,000,000 and last year $1,500,000,000 and "that wasn't due to accident."

He repeated a Denver statement: "I can say definitely that the Republicans are trying to sabotage the West. If you let the same 'gang' get control of the Government in November, I won't have any sympathy with you."

Garner to Entertain Truman and Family

Uvalde, Tex., Sept. 20 (U.P.).—Former Vice President John Vance Garner will entertain President Truman and his family at breakfast in his home here next Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret, telegraphed their acceptance of Garner's invitation today.

Breakfast at the Garner house by custom is a big meal and it was understood that Garner planned to serve game fowl, probably dove, which is now in season here.

Old-Line GOP Victorious in Rhode Island

Providence, R. I., Sept. 20 (AP).—Rhode Island's Republican primary tonight saw a slate backed by the old-line GOP State committee score an impressive victory over one led by a World War II hero.

Socialite Thomas Pierpont Hazard, 55-year-old industrialist, won the nomination for United States Senator, and Mayor Albert P. Ruerat of Warwick, 44, was named the party's candidate for Governor.

Only Republicans voted today—the State's first direct primary election in history.

Democrats, who have controlled the State's Administration for all but two of the last 18 years, hold their primary September 29.

State Senator Raoul A. Archambault, jr., 28-year-old former Marine Corps major and one of Rhode Island's most decorated servicemen, had challenged the entrenched Republican Party leaders in seeking the nomination for Governor.

The count in 180 of the State's 200 districts gave Ruerat 24,556; Archambault, 15,882. State Representative Richard D. Windsor of East Providence, who ran independently of both factions, polled only 2539.

Hazard, a former State treasurer, won easily over former State Attorney-General Louis Jackovny, who was aligned with the Archambault group.

Federal Workers May Hold Balance of Power in Election

The 1,859,000 Federal workers in this country could easily hold the balance of power in the November elections in many of the 48 States.

Outside the District, California with 198,959 Government employes continues to lead all other States in Federal employment according to a new survey by the Civil Service Commission. New York is second with 176,817 employes, and Pennsylvania is third with 108,651.

The Civil Service breakdown reveals that the big bulk of Federal people are in three agencies—the military departments, Post Office and Veterans. It follows:

Hyattsville Fights Injunctions on Meters

Hyattsville Mayor Caesar L. Aiello and City Attorneys Nicholas Orem, jr., were directed by the Hyattsville City Council last night to "take such action as is necessary" to secure dissolution of two injunctions barring installation of parking meters in the city.

The two temporary injunctions were granted by Judge Charles C. Marbury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court last week.

One of the injunctions, filed on behalf of the owners of the Queens Chapel Shopping Center in West Hyattsville, contends that sidewalks in front of the center are private property and had not been dedicated to public use.

Orem read correspondence to the council, however, in which the owners were said to have offered the sidewalks and a letter in which the City Council had accepted them.

The other suit, filed on behalf of a group of Hyattsville merchants, contends that the council is charging a fee for the use of a public highway, increases the burden on the taxpayers, is in violation of the State motor vehicle law which requires uniform motor vehicle laws, and that the orders to install the meters were adopted by the council after the time for adoption of tax levies.

Orem said that the motor vehicle law specifically exempts parking regulations and that the council has authority to change expenditures under the levy even though the levy itself cannot be changed.

Army Sergeant's Death in Maryland Ruled a Suicide

A 33-year-old Army staff sergeant was found dead in a carbon monoxide-filled automobile 120 feet from Greenbelt rd. near Berwyn Heights yesterday by two Maryland State troopers.

Police said the soldier, George R. Campbell of New York, had connected a hose to the exhaust pipe and extended it through a rear window. He also had drank a quantity of poison, police added.

A note in the car addressed to his wife indicated domestic difficulties, police said. He was being transferred from Fort Dix, N. J., to Camp Pickett, Va.

Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Negro Firemen Lose Point in Railroad Case

A legal technicality yesterday rendered void a temporary injunction preventing the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen from discriminating against Negro firemen in promotion rights.

The United States Court of Appeals set aside the District Court injunction granted here last spring, and held that the lower court did not have jurisdiction. The appeals court decided that under the Federal Court rules, the suit should have been filed in Cleveland, Ohio, the principal place of business of the brotherhood.

The suit was brought when the firemen sued the brotherhood as their bargaining agent. The plaintiffs—21 Negro firemen—said the brotherhood had conspired with Southern railroad companies to deprive Negroes of seniority rights to advancement in positions with railroads.

The firemen asked the court to determine their rights, give an injunction against discrimination and damages for loss of work and wages because of the alleged discrimination.

A special appeal was allowed after the temporary injunction was granted by Judge Alexander Holtzoff in District Court. The case was to be heard on its merits this autumn.

"SAVINGS SOLD ME ON FORD SERVICE"

It's Faster and Better 4 Ways

1. Ford-trained mechanics

"I feel my Ford's their 'baby'. After all, it's their business and who else could do as skilled a job at such a saving!"

2. Factory-approved methods

"I know my Ford Dealer is following a factory Rx. No wonder jobs take less time (and that means lower time charges!)"

3. Special Ford Equipment

"And with Ford-designed tools doing the job, it's done right the first time. Yes sir, I like the savings I get at my Ford Dealer's."

4. Genuine Ford Parts

". . . are exact duplicates of parts built into my car. They're made right, to fit right and last longer in my Ford."

"It's just Mrs. Schultz in 2-B smoking hams again"

Even if Mrs. Schultz—or you—had a real honest-to-goodness smokehouse, it would be mighty inconvenient to keep a slow fire going for hours on end to smoke one or two hams.

Nor would it be practical to buy a whole pig to get the one-eighth that is ham. It's problems like this that meat packing companies handle for you. When you want ham, you can buy just ham.

Turning livestock into meat and making available a wide variety of kinds and cuts wherever they are wanted, whether a few blocks or a thousand miles away, is the meat packers' job.

By-products, which are carefully saved and sold, help pay expenses. And, after all expenses are paid, meat packers' profits average a fraction of a cent a pound.

Store-size pieces. First step is dressing the meat. Next, it has to be cut and processed into a wide variety of fresh cuts, cured and smoked meats, and sausage.

Research improves products. A recent discovery will soon make it possible to make lard so that it will stay fresh even outside the refrigerator. This also means crackers, cookies and other foods will stay sweet and fresh longer.

There are thousands of meat packing companies in the United States. This means your retailer can buy competitively and offer you the widest possible variety.

U. S. Income Rate Tops 221 Billions

National income rose to an annual rate of $221,400,000,000 in the second quarter of 1948, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

This is an all-time high.

Corporate profits increased more than any other type of income, even without counting "paper profits" on inventories, the department added.

The April-May-June rate of total national income was $6,300,000,000 above that for the first quarter. It was $18,900,000,000 above the figure for the full year 1947.

"Business developments in August . . . showed little indication of any let-up in the high rate of economic activity," the department's office of business economics commented.

Wage Factor Cited

"Industrial prices continued to advance . . . as the influence of third-round wage advances spread . . . and as continuing high incomes maintained the demand pressures.

"In contrast to generally rising industrial prices, agricultural prices moved downward under the influence of the prospective record high level of agricultural crop production."

The department said all other types of income shared in lesser degree the increases achieved in corporate profits.

On an annual rate basis, corporate profits rose from $24,700,000,000 in the first quarter to $30,900,000,000 in the second, excluding $2,500,000,000 in "paper profits" on inventories.

Counting the paper profits too, the department said, corporate profits before taxes—$33,400,000,000 at an annual rate—showed an increase of 7 per cent over the first quarter this year and 16 per cent over the second quarter of 1947.

"The movement of profits after taxes was similar," the department said. "Most of the increase in profits . . . occurred among manufacturing firms . . . and also in railroads."

Hermetical Seal

The Soviet government is going to extreme lengths to isolate even its little children from contact with the outside world. The school for children of Soviet officials in New York was recently closed, with an outcome so sensational as to bring it to universal attention. Mrs. Kasenkina's leap from the window of the Russian Consulate served more than to save her liberty and probably her life. It focused all eyes on one of the most far-fetched aspects of the iron-curtain mentality. With less attendant fanfare, the Russians have also closed similar schools in Berlin, Tehran, and elsewhere lest either teachers or pupils inhale a free-flying democratic idea.

The Soviet leaders are perhaps the most fearful men in the world today, and what they most fear is the breath of ideas contrary to their own tight dogma. Freedom of thought and of the exchange of thought are intolerable in the Soviet atmosphere. When even its little children are allowed only the officially distorted concepts of life, knowledge and understanding are sure to suffer. Fear breeds fear, and mutual fear leads to war. If there is any consolation to be drawn on this side of the curtain that the more ignorant the Russians are of world realities, the weaker they are bound to be in conflict, it is negatived by the evidence that this action affords of a sort of desperation over the presence in the world of concepts that are different from their own.

Truman's Tactics

President Truman's all-out assault upon his political opponents, the Eightieth Congress in particular, is doubtless winning him political favor in some quarters. Judging from the response of his audiences, it is far more popular to throw bricks at Congress than at Wall Street, many of the denizens of which must be envying the well-heeled farmers of the Western prairies, who are attending Mr. Truman's meetings in their own planes. Thoughtful citizens cannot help asking, however, whether the President is doing himself, the country or the cause of democratic government any good by his onslaught on Congress.

Mr. Truman has not been content to direct his barbs at specific actions of Congress. Nor has he narrowed his target to individual leaders in the Senate and House; rather, he has assailed Congress as a legislative body. His sweeping indictments thus inevitably hit members of his own party no less than the Republican leaders of the last Congress. Should the President be reelected, his only hope of securing enactment of whatever program he may then propose would be cooperation with many of the men who have been victims of his biting denunciations.

The two measures for which Congress is most frequently assailed are the Taft-Hartly Act and the Tax Reduction Act of 1948. Whatever may be the shortcomings of either law, they were enacted with heavy Democratic support. Among the Democratic Senators voting to override the President's veto of the Taft-Hartley bill were Tydings and O'Conor of Maryland, Byrd and Robertson of Virginia, George and Russell of Georgia, McKellar and Stewart of Tennessee, McClellan and Fulbright of Arkansas, Overton and Ellender of Louisiana, and Connally and O'Daniel of Texas. Many of these men also voted to override the President's veto of the tax reduction bill, with the addition of Senators Sparkman and Hill of Alabama, Senator Johnson of Colorado and Senator Thomas of Utah. If the Democratic Party won control of the Senate as well as the White House, the committee chairmen that Mr. Truman would have to work with would probably include Senators McKellar, Tydings, Connally, Johnson, McClellan and Thomas. The President's unrestrained attack on the record that these men have helped to make could scarcely be conducive to executive-legislative cooperation. Governor Dewey is taking full advantage of the President's reckless tactics by announcing that he plans to work in cooperation with Congress.

Mr. Truman's campaigning has the strange effect, moreover, of putting him into the position of challenger. That is a risky reversal of the role Presidents have usually played in the past. Almost invariably the incumbent of the White House seeking to remain there has stood upon his record and let his opponent do the challenging. Now Governor Dewey has taken the position of the aloof and would-be invulnerable candidate almost by default. This curious situation raises an interesting question as to whether a President can win a vote of confidence chiefly by attacking those who have thwarted him.

It is undoubtedly true that Mr. Truman has to make a spectacular showing if he is to win, with the Wallaceites cut off from his left and the Dixiecrats from his right. But it is also true that Mr. Truman has lost much good will and prestige by reason of a reckless quality in some of his official actions. By burning his bridges between the White House and the Capitol and specializing in abuse he now risks adding more to this unfavorable aspect of his reputation than he can gain by any amount of two-fisted scrapping. For the voters are more likely to be interested in the ability of the respective candidates to direct a highly complex governmental mechanism during the next four years than in their relative skill in hurling colorful epithets.

Queuille's Vote

With a majority of 30 the French Assembly has authorized M. Queuille to set a program of economic stabilization in motion. Where Marie and Schuman failed, this quiet little physician has succeeded. M. Queuille, to be sure, is a thoroughly seasoned politician, with more energy than Schuman and more standing than Marie. He is a veteran of many governments of the Third Republic, including those of Daladier and Reynaud, a former Senator, and later a member of General de Gaulle's Committee of Liberation. Yet he is not responsible for this surcease from deadlock and interparty squabbling. It is the situation—a situation in which France finds itself both the host of the United Nations, and, to boot, the scene where the Russo-Western dispute over Germany will come to a head. Even so, the life of the Queuille regime would doubtless have been abruptly short without some undertaking on his part that there will be an early appeal to the electorate.

Hitherto the irony of the present political position in France has been that the so-called democratic forces of the middle were fearful of an appeal to demos. The Gaullists, on the other hand, have been insistent upon it, though that fact has not taken the edge off the abuse of the general as antidemocratic. A referendum is undoubtedly overdue. In many countries repeated collapse of government would have completely undermined the system on which it operates—in this case the parliamentary system. Not, however, in France, where the democracy of the people has deep and pervasive roots. Nobody knows this better than General de Gaulle, and all he wants is a working framework, based upon the same kind of separation of powers that the United States enjoys, within which a political democracy can flourish. The economic crisis in France requires for its solution order in society, faith in the political regime, and representation of government. M. Queuille will have an uphill task in promoting the first two desiderata, and has promised the third. He will have the utmost goodwill for his success from the rest of the free world, though the question may be raised whether he is justified in seeking aid from ECA funds in solving fiscal problems which are purely French, as he did in his speech to the Assembly.

Gift Horse

The Moscow announcement that all Russian troops will be withdrawn from Korea by January is an astutely timed effort to put the United States on the spot before the United Nations General Assembly. American garrisons remain in South Korea, and American policy has been to await consideration of the Korean issue by the General Assembly. The Kremlin's corollary demand for the evacuation of American forces is calculated to have considerable propaganda value.

It is true that the record of Russian noncooperation over Korea is too voluminous for the troop withdrawal to be interpreted as any burst of altruism. The permanence of the thirty-eighth parallel barrier dividing the two zones is of Russian creation. The Soviet Union refused to admit U. N. election observers to North Korea, and her troop withdrawal offer of a year ago was pretty clearly intended to pave the way for communizing all Korea. The fact that the Russians are willing to remove their armies now must mean that they are confident that the puppet North Korean government and its militia are tightly organized.

But it is here that the Russian position also is the most vulnerable. The Moscow announcement referred to the Communist government as "a united Korean government composed of representatives of various political trends of North and South Korea representing the overwhelming majority of the population of North and South Korea." That, patently, it is not. By barring the U. N. electoral commission the Russians forfeited all claim to legitimacy for their stooge. The only legitimate native government in Korea is the Korean Republic set up in the south as the result of the U. N.-sponsored elections which the Russians boycotted.

This presents a ready-made opportunity for a positive American approach. Korea already is a matter before the General Assembly. Let us seize the initiative by taking up the Russian troop withdrawal proposal and coupling it with a demand for a new election under U. N. auspices to encompass North Korea and a concurrent request that the native constabularies of both zones be placed under the United Nations pending the formation of a united government. Such a move on our part would have the virtue of offering a way out of the impasse within the framework of the U. N., and it would place upon Russia the choice either of cooperating or of losing any moral advantage to which her latest gyration in North Korea might superficially entitle her.

As The Assembly Meets

The outstanding reality as the third annual meeting of the General Assembly opens today in Paris is that all good faith has oozed out of Russo-American relations. This is the depressing thought that will hang over the deliberations—or, better put, fireworks. In organization and in fact the United Nations rests upon a community of interest between the United States and the Soviet Union as the real powerholders of the world. Not only do they enjoy a veto power in United Nations councils—this is enjoyed by Britain, France, and China as well—but they also hold stellar power, with the other members swimming more or less within their respective orbits. The gulf that now divides them, therefore, threatens to overwhelm the world in conflict.

For the combat the American delegates have been girding themselves. Fortunately they have had some experience in Soviet use of the United Nations as an arena of propaganda. At the first Assembly disarmament was the motif of Soviet forensics—a disarmament which was intended to demobilize the United States of the atom bomb while leaving the Soviet Union with all the organization and apparatus (barring the bomb) of a military state. Vishinsky's charges of war-mongering against Americans were the club for the battle of words at the second Assembly. What is the chosen weapon—we mean outside the official agenda—for the oratorical joust that will feature the present Assembly? We fancy that the rod now in pickle for the Americans will turn out to be the alleged preparations for war that in the last 12 months the United States has undertaken for self-defense. Whatever it is, some aid in countering the verbal onslaught may be expected from the conditioning of world opinion to the specious tactics of Kremlin spokesmen.

At the same time there will be enough that is plausible in the Soviet tirade to call for the utmost skill in meeting it. The best defense is offense, and we hope that the American delegates will seize and retain the initiative. The reason that good faith has evaporated in Russo-American relations, the reason that this Nation is rearming, is that the Soviet Union has treated its treaties and engagements as scraps of paper. Peaceful relations are based on treaty respect, but at no time in history, surely, has a country littered the international scene with broken engagements as the Soviet Union has done since the war. Mr. Byrnes made a point of this in his recent speech at Seattle. It is not so much, he said, the wartime compacts themselves that account for the present conflict as the fact that Moscow has not kept them. This is true enough. Three months ago public pressure brought out of the State Department a list of about 40 engagements that the Soviet had violated, and the list has grown since it was published. The nature and the extent of the violations ought to be the spearhead of the American case in Paris.

This opening is essential if the crisis in Berlin is to be kept in proper perspective. And, judging from Secretary Marshall's grave words on the eve of his departure for Paris, that issue is bound to be dumped into the lap of the United Nations. This will be the great power dispute from which from the beginning the United Nations has shrunk. But there appears to be no escaping it. It is in the nature of things that nonparties in the United Nations will seek to discover a middle ground for a solution. Nothing short of Soviet acceptance of Western rights of access to and presence in Berlin, however, is acceptable to the United States. The United States, Britain and France have gone almost the limit this side of appeasement. If treaty respect is the cornerstone of international relations, then there must be a reaffirmation of the agreements concerning Berlin. The course likely to suggest itself in Paris would be a reference of the dispute to The Hague Court for a juridical determination of rights. It is a course that this newspaper would applaud. But what would Moscow say? Judging from past experience, the Kremlin would not agree. Vishinsky in Belgrade repeated his assertion at the second Assembly that the court is inadmissible to the Soviet Union as an adjudicator—a plain record of the Soviet rejection of right in favor of might and expediency. If that remains the Soviet attitude, peace would be impossible to maintain.

Perhaps the Soviet Union will go on a new tack in furtherance of its noncooperative and aggressive policy in Germany. The Assembly might hear the Russians call for a simultaneous withdrawal from Germany of all occupation troops. The premonitory sign is the Soviet proposal to get out of Korea. Doubtless the American delegates are prepared for such a gambit, and might, indeed, anticipate it. To quit Germany is the end of Allied policy. It involves guarantees laid down in the agreements set forth at Potsdam, and would have to be preceded by free elections subject to international supervision. Would the Soviet Union agree? We hardly think so. To be sure, if the troops were to quit now, the struggle for Germany would be heavily weighted on the Soviet side, for the Eastern zone is in part communized, and Russian-trained German forces are at Soviet disposal. But Germany is not in anything like the ripe condition for absorption that Korea is. And Moscow would shrink, it seems to us, from a free inquiry of German opinion, let alone the guarantees that are the prerequisites of the end of occupation.

Moreover, this line of attack clearly would be a red herring that not even the meanest intelligence could mistake. The first requirement is settlement of the argument over rights, and insistence upon legally acquired rights is plainly in the interest of the world of nations. This should be the keynote when the Berlin crisis comes to Paris. We hope Mr. Marshall is endowed with the wisdom that he invoked before he boarded his plane, and that it will be remembered that the beginning of wisdom is attention to realities.

Reality In Art

I should like to thank you for publishing John C. Rogers' letters of September 8 and 15 on Pan American art, as his remarks on contemporary painting are very timely.

Any thinking person with his eyes wide open can see that painting has declined steadily since the time of Cezanne and Van Gogh until it has reached a truly depressing state of decadence. This decline is due to the reluctance or the inability of painters to look fearlessly upon nature and to record what the eye sees and what the mind and spirit discovers in her—in short; to set down the truth, and to set it down coherently, so that the record may be read by others — at least by those others who are willing to give close attention to it; and by their supine reliance on and repetition of the forms of others.

Besides the difficulty, formidable in itself, of finding the truth, the painter must find out a way of expressing it so that it must be understood. This is a struggle which breaks all but the most persistent.

Composition, as it is taught in art schools, is not the answer. Art schools can only diagram the compositions of dead painters. They can only show how painters of the past have solved their problems. This is useful, of course, as it shows the thing can be done. It does not show the painter how he can solve his problem.

To a living artist truth as he has discovered it is a living thing, and the form in which he expresses it must be drawn out of the most profound reaches of his own being, slowly and painfully. Only in that way can his painting be imbued with life. All great painting lives, and like all living things has a power in it that cannot be analyzed, a power that draws men toward it age after age, inexhaustibly and perennially fascinating.

Such a living thing can be created only by a strong man, and strong men in the art world are either nonexistent today, or are working out of sight. If they are working out of sight, and the public wants to call them forth, it will not do so by supporting weak artists or by tolerating bad paintings, but by repudiating them both. LOUISE TUCKER.

Greenbelt Rents

Before the Maryland Rent Control Board is an application to increase rent ceilings on 1875 dwellings. The landlord bases his application on a desire to bring the income on his property to a level comparable to that in the adjacent area.

He does not claim that present rents are inadequate because of operating expense. He does not pretend that his maintenance of his property since he built it in 1937 has been anything but bad. He just wants to get as high rents as his neighboring landlords do.

He's not asking for any piddling little 10 per cent increase, either. Average increase asked on his property is 30 per cent. For the house we occupy, he's asking $16 a month more—although he's provided no paint to the interior since we moved in two years ago, and did not in fact do so after the former tenants left.

He knows, though, that he has us over a barrel. While $16 a month more will be hard to dig up, it won't be as hard as finding another place to live, with three children.

Our landlord is on record as favoring controls to stop inflationary practices by big business. He very bitterly attacks Republican lawmakers for not passing anti-inflationary measures. He recently gave all of his employes—including myself—a $15 a month salary increase to cover past increases in uncontrolled living costs.

Our landlord is not big business; not Republican lawmakers. Through the Public Housing Administration our landlord is the present Democratic Administration of the Federal Government. GREENBELT TENANT.

Buyers' Strikes

The attempt to cure high prices by buyers' strikes is the logical sequence to rationing. The main thing to remember is that those who strike get no meats or other things. After a little reflection people will see the futility of this. It is human nature to blame something else and not the real cause.

The campaign to cure high prices by not buying is too primitive. In the first place those who refuse to buy foods won't eat until they become hungry and are forced back to their senses. They make the individual butcher or meat and food dealer the scapegoat!

These people have to pay high prices for their foods and in order to stay in business they have to charge high prices. Cattle and hogs are scarce and feed expensive, due to our policy of encouraging farmers in raising wheat for gifts to Europe and elsewhere, all at the expense of dairying.

Now if people would regain their senses and vote against this, they would get someplace. S. J. SIMONSEN.

St. Mary's Schools

I read with pleasure the very fine section of The Washington Post of September 12 devoted to education, but I note with definite alarm the article by Mr. Edward Ryan relative to Maryland.

The article in question points out the great forward strides that public education in our State has made in the past few years. The article goes on to point out Baltimore as an exception and notes it as the only locality where the school building program lags behind.

The fact of the matter is that nowhere in the State of Maryland is the school building picture so black as it is in St. Marys County. The people are endeavoring to bring about a modernization and building program in our county so that children attending school may no longer have to dress as for an Antarctic expedition for a day at school in winter, may no longer have to drink water from a pail, may not have to look out through translucent "glass cloth" in lieu of glazed windows in school! It is injustice to have your great paper imply that this offers "no cause for complaint."

A further fact is that the State superintendent of schools is conducting a detailed survey of the county's building needs. This survey, when released, will serve to amplify the very real building needs pointed out recently by Delegate Oliver Guyther's St. Marys County Educational Planning Committee. This committee, composed of leading citizens and taxpayers of our county, has without reservation recommended, jointly with the board of education, a renovation and building program in the amount of over $900,000. Many believe this too conservative an estimate. W. C. GLEITER.

"Mecca Of Mediocrity"

For many years I have been listening to the physicians' argument that the relationship between the doctor and the patient is of the utmost importance in the success of medical care. The argument has made sense. Without mutual understanding the physician cannot possibly have the sympathy for the patient necessary to give him insight and patience necessary to successful care.

It is most unfortunate for the majority of the population of the city of Washington that with respect to one of the partners in this relationship, the physician, the patient-physician relationship has fallen to a very low state. Speaking officially for the physicians of the District of Columbia, the D. C. Medical Society stated in the September 17 issue of The Washington Post, its views of the largest segment of its patients, the Government workers.

To quote the Medical Society, Washington is a "mecca of mediocrity" for many Government workers. The doctors also feel that their patients are overpaid and hold them in contempt as incompetents. As the physicians put it, "Not only are too many over-paid for what they do, but a large number are not competent enough to obtain private employment which will assure them of the income they are now receiving."

This, Government worker, is what your physician thinks of you. The next time you see your physician you may be reassured by the knowledge that he holds you in contempt. This will do much to inspire in you the "confidence" which is recognized as so "necessary" in successful medical care.

PAT A. BRENNECKE.

Washington.

I wonder how many doctors, no matter how incompetent they are, make less than the top salary of the best trained Government employe, not forgetting that a good many have had as good an education or better than any M. D.

BARNETT P. KLIBANOFF.

Washington.

What is the line of thought of this District Medical Society? To lump a charge of governmental mediocrity with its opposition to socialized medicine suggests a tactic—that the public should (for purpose of discouraging socialized medicine) be discouraged from having confidence in the Government, not merely for possible socialized medicine but for any other purpose as well. If this is the thought behind this combination of ideas, then it would suggest a very serious moral deficiency in our physicians such as I would not want to believe.

The physicians have every right to object to socialized medicine, although I suspect that everything they call socialized medicine may not actually be that at all. However, they have every right to oppose whatever they may want to oppose as a governmental program. I am sure that the general public, however, is much more likely to suspect the merits of whatever case the medics may wish to make if they indulge in general tactic of trying to undermine the confidence in the Government for that or any other purpose.

MICHAEL ESTERLY.

Editor's Note: The District Medical Society advises that the opinions expressed in the article which appeared in the society's Annals are the view of the author rather than the official opinions of the organization.

Jinnah's Religion

In your editorial of September 13 under the caption "Mohammed Ali Jinnah" you write of the late Quaid-i-Azam Mohammad Ali Jinnah, founder and father of Pakistan as "being born a Hindu."

This, Sir, is a very grave error of fact. The late Quaid-i-Azam was born a Moslem, so was his father, and his grandfather too was a Moslem.

Independent Senate

IN THE effort to whip up interest in what seems to be a most unequal race, a great deal is being written about the struggle for control of the Senate next year. Much of this speculation is mere wordage, since the fact is that neither party has exercised control over the Senate, in the broadest meaning of the word, for many years.

The Senate is a collection of individualists, often rugged individualists. These individualists do not take to party discipline and fairly frequently they thumb their noses at party whips.

In a limited sense, of course, a Republican Administration would have an advantage in a Senate majority, however slim the margin. It would mean that the Republican majority could organize and name their own ranking Senators to committee chairmanships.

The chairmen exert a powerful influence over the machinery of the Senate. They can block legislation or push it through at high speed if they so desire.

This, however, is about the extent of the advantage. Party disciplinarians cannot enforce party regularity in the Senate in behalf of a program. When the word control is used in that sense, as it often is by pressure groups anxious to have a Republican Administration go down the line for their own highly specialized objectives, it is simply a fiction.

IT IS WHEN the margin between the parties is narrowest that the independents exert their greatest influence. What that means for the Senate that will sit in January is not hard to foresee.

A more or less coherent group of Republican independents have on numerous occasions defied party regularity to vote with the opposition. This group includes Senators Wayne Morse of Oregon, George D. Aiken of Vermont, Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire and William Langer of North Dakota. All four will return, since their terms do not expire this year. And they are not likely to have their views changed by a Republican victory.

Often voting with this group is another independent, Republican Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky. Reported to be in a close race with his Democratic opponent, Cooper has a good record and he won wide respect on both sides of the aisle for his integrity and courage.

These men have much more in common with certain Democrats who consistently vote their own convictions than they do with standpatters in the Republican Party. Incidentally, two troglodytes from the Republican side will be absent when the roll is called in January, Senator Albert W. Hawkes of New Jersey and Senator Ed Moore of Oklahoma, both having decided to retire.

ON THE Democratic side the retirement of Pappy O'Daniel of Texas is a decided gain. He will be replaced by Representative Lyndon B. Johnson, who made an excellent record in the House. The defeat in the primary of Senator Tom Stewart of Tennessee was likewise a gain. It is probable that he will be succeeded by Representative Estes Kefauver, who gave the first trouncing of his life to Boss Crump of Memphis. Even though the Dewey - Warren ticket should carry Tennessee, there is a good chance that enough voters will scratch the ballot to vote for Kefauver on the basis of his liberal record.

Independent Republicans and Democrats working together may be a kind of third force in the new Senate. A great deal will depend on the course the new President steers.

Such a third force, composed of independents and liberals in both parties, would certainly oppose the lobbyists now counting on a Republican sweep to get what they have long wanted. The interests that hire these lobbyists will spend big money in the coming campaign to get a Congress they believe will be compliant.

By pouring hundreds of thousands of dollars into a few key States they may win a technical victory and the Republicans may have a majority of one or two enabling them to organize the Senate. This could prove to be an empty victory.

When Republican bigwigs go into States other than their own to tell voters in those States what representatives to send to Congress, they will find themselves on delicate ground. And that goes for Candidate Thomas E. Dewey. In the West and in the South, particularly, there is a spirit of independence easily affronted by any attempt at dictation or even advice from the countryside. If they believe in a man, they will vote for him regardless of party labels or slurs cast by the opposition.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Berlin And U. N.

THERE MAY be a useful way in which the Berlin dispute can be taken to the United Nations but if a plan has been worked out, it is still an unusually well-kept state secret. The crux of the problem is that in the Berlin dispute all the great powers, all the middle powers, and almost all the small European nations, are directly involved. There is, therefore, almost no chance that the judgment and recommendation of the Assembly could produce a Bernadotte to represent the search for peace and justice over and above the conflicting interests and ambitions of the parties to the dispute.

LIPPMANN

Yet before we can in good conscience take the dispute to the U. N. we shall have to reconcile the fact that we are one of the principals in the dispute with the fact that as a leading power in the United Nations we have a solemn obligation to work for the solution of disputes. We cannot ask the United Nations to solve a problem which we do not know how to solve. As a member of the United Nations we have to be prepared to propose a plan by which disputes can be brought to a solution.

THE BERLIN crisis has been developing over a period of nine months—since the breakup of the meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers which was held in London last autumn. The four powers were unable to agree on any important features of a German peace treaty. The failure of those negotiations led to the decision that since there was no prospect of an acceptable four power agreement on all of Germany, the three Western Allies should make a three power agreement on as much of Germany as they controlled.

But this grave decision left out of account the fact that though the three Western powers have a vital interest in maintaining their position in Berlin, they do not control Berlin. Berlin can be administered as a community only by four power agreement. The Russians were quick to see the anomaly in our position: that we stood for three power control of western Germany and and for four power control of Berlin.

THERE IS no real mystery, I believe, about the fundamental issue of the Moscow negotiations. It was whether in return for the recognition of four power rights in Berlin, we would recognize four power rights in western Germany. It was never possible, we must I believe suppose, that we could induce the Russians to lift the blockade unless they had some kind of commitment from us to review and reconsider the three power arrangements for western Germany. For if the Russians had recognized our rights in Berlin without a corresponding recognition of their rights in an all-Germany peace settlement, they would have suffered an immense diplomatic defeat.

Their strategical and logistical position in Berlin is, however, too strong for that. It is so strong, despite the marvel of the air lift, that the best we could have hoped for immediately was a temporary relaxation of the blockade in return for some sort of understanding to postpone irrevocable action in the establishment of a western German government.

IT FOLLOWS that while the Berlin crisis might be alleviated, it cannot be resolved unless the four powers are able to negotiate a general German peace treaty. Until that is done Berlin will still be deep within the Soviet zone of occupation and Berlin will be for us a diplomatic Bataan.

Yet there will be little point in having another Council of Foreign Ministers to deal with Germany as long as the four powers hold firm in all the main positions on which they are irreconcilably divided. The Soviet conception of a German settlement, as set forth a year ago, is quite unacceptable; it is obviously designed to bring into being a German government which would be at first the vassal and later, as Germany recovered her power, the ally of the Soviet Union. For the time being there is no possibility that our conception of a German treaty would be acceptable to the Soviet Union.

OUR conception is, however, not very clear, and is capable, therefore, of modification. That will take time. But it is by no means impossible that we could still develop a plan for a German settlement, which would win the support of all the neighbors of Germany, and in the end convince the men in the Kremlin that it is the least undesirable of the alternatives open to them.

IT IS significant in this connection that the Russians have found it necessary to send Colonel Tulpanov to a public meeting in Erfurt in their zone to say again that "the eastern borders of Germany . . . are unchangeable." This surely is a sign of how urgent it is for them to reassure the Poles, even at the price of depriving the German Communists of their best argument. It is a sign too that they know they cannot now establish an eastern German government which would have any appeal to the Germans.

Now the only kind of Germany which could ever accept the Polish frontier, or even some modification of it, would be a loose confederation of German states in which the interests and powers of the states were preeminent over German nationalism. This was the original American view. It has always been the French view. It could become the Polish and the Czech view.

IF OUR plan for a German settlement is based on confederation, and placed within the framework of a confederation of Europe, or at least continental Europe, we could have a plan worth taking to a peace conference.

Meanwhile, since the development of such a plan is a great and difficult task, especially for the very tired men who are now responsible for Western policy, our immediate objective should be to relax the tension, reduce the crisis, by the compromises which a resourceful diplomacy could devise.

Court Is Told Locals Must Bow to ITU

Indianapolis, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Federal Court contempt trial of the AFL International Typographical Union began today with testimony that newspaper printers are compelled to follow the International's collective bargaining instructions.

The ITU and its officers are charged with requiring its local unions to insist on contract terms violating the Taft-Hartley law in the face of an injunction issued last March by Judge Luther M. Swygert.

Daniel F. Smith, general manager of the La Salle (Ill.) Daily News-Tribune, and John F. O'Keefe, secretary of the Chicago Newspaper Publishers Association, were the principal witnesses.

Smith, a former ITU member, testified that a tentative contract agreement reached between the La Salle newspaper and ITU Local No. 442 was submitted for approval to the ITU International in April, but was rejected.

ITU Letter Cited

Then, Smith said, the local received a letter from the International saying that only an agreement incorporating the International's form contract could be approved.

"In other words," Smith told Judge Swygert, "they (the local) had to follow instructions sent out from the International's headquarters. They could not deviate. That was the instruction they had."

Attorneys for the National Labor Relations Board contend in the case that the International's form contract contains clauses tending to cause employment discrimination against non-union members. They said this violates the Taft-Hartley law and Judge Swygert's injunction.

O'Keefe had only identified a series of union and publishers' contract offers in Chicago newspaper negotiations before court was adjourned for the day. He will resume testimony tomorrow.

Objections Slow Hearing

Frequent objections by ITU Attorney Gerhard Van Arkel slowed the pace of the hearing. Most of them were overruled by Judge Swygert.

At the outset Van Arkel urged dismissal of the entire contempt case or, in lieu of that, a decision on documents before the court without evidence or testimony. Swygert decided to go ahead with the trial and to reserve a ruling on the dismissal motion.

Another of Van Arkel's objections concerned taking of testimony regarding newspaper negotiations with ITU locals in cities unlisted in the NLRB's contempt petition.

Winter Fuel Oil Dearth Feared From Strike

The Nation faces another heating fuel shortage this winter if the strike in the California oil industry continues, Max W. Ball, director of the Interior Department's oil and gas division, warned yesterday.

Even if the strike were settled today, he told a press conference, the fuel situation would be "tight" on the West Coast all winter. The balance of supply and demand throughout the Nation is so close that any one of a score of factors, such as bad weather, unexpected military demands, further strikes or diversion of imports would create a serious shortage, he said.

Ball's warning followed an appeal to the Governors of 33 Eastern States to appoint or reappoint oil coordinators to aid industry and Government in their efforts to prevent a recurrence of last winter's petroleum supply difficulties. The function of the oil coordinators woul dbe to cooperate with the five regional advisory committees of the petroleum industry "to guard against consumer hardship if temporary oil shortages should occur this fall and winter," Ball said.

26 Employes Walk Out In Tucker Auto Plant

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—The AFL United Auto Workers called a strike today at the Tucker Corp. automobile plant, already only in partial operation because of a Securities and Exchange Commission inquiry.

Albert Devito, a union representative, said the walkout was authorized by the union's international office. Preston Tucker, company president, termed it an "unauthorized attempt at a work stoppage."

The union sent out postcards to its members notifying them of picket duty and saying "this may mean the end of Tucker."

Tucker's statement said 26 shop workers walked out "apparently at the instigation of disgruntled labor organizers." Devito said about 50 workers of the 120 now employed in the plant were out.

Mediation Board to Meet With Rail Disputants

The National Mediation Board will meet with railroad and union officials in Chicago Thursday seeking to settle a dispute affecting one million workers.

Announcing this yesterday, a board member said conferences will be held separately with spokesmen for the Nation's Class 1 railroads and representatives of 16 labor organizations which speak for the vast majority of the "non-operating" employes.

Wage talks between the two sides broke down Friday at Chicago. At that time a union official said "we are taking immediate steps for a strike vote."

Latin Intervention

By Sumner Welles

Blow To Hemisphere Solidarity

THE PEREGRINATIONS of a Latin-American agitator are rarely news. After Dr. Arnulfo Arias was removed from the Presidency by the authorities of Panama six years ago, his journey through South America to stir up hostility to the United States aroused little interest. But reports of his activities in Central America, since his recent defeat in Panama's presidential elections, cannot be so lightly dismissed. They serve to warn of developments in the Caribbean which endanger the entire hemisphere.

Strangely enough, Arnulfo Arias is a half brother of Harmodio Arias, one of the ablest and most truly democratic Presidents Panama has had. Our present treaty which gives just recognition to Panamanian rights, and which establishes a partnership between the United States and Panama in the protection and maintenance of the canal, was negotiated during the Presidency of Harmodio Arias.

Yet when Arnulfo Arias later became President, his totalitarian leanings, and his obvious belief that in carrying out the treaty's reciprocal provisions it was more blessed for his government to receive than to give, impeded the friendly collaboration for which the treaty provided.

FOR SOME time there has been a close understanding between Arnulfo Arias, President Arevalo of Guatemala, and the Costa Rican dictator, Jose Figueres. After his defeat at the polls Dr. Arias flew first to Costa Rica, and then to Guatemala. Here he obtained arms and military advisers.

Returning to Costa Rica in a Guatemalan army plane, he prepared to send the revolutionary force he had been helped to assemble across the frontier into Panama. At that moment news of the conspiracy leaked out. It also became known that Panama and Nicaragua had agreed on mutual support if either suffered aggression from Costa Rican territory. The Costa Rican dictator found it expedient to appear to disavow Dr. Arias by ordering him to leave the country.

But there is no doubt that Dr. Arias, now in Mexico, waiting, he says, for "favorable developments," will continue to receive support from the governments of Guatemala and Costa Rica, as well as from that of Venezuela. For his return to power would advance their objective of establishing throughout the Caribbean regimes of their own ideology.

THE MEN dominating these three countries are assuming the right to aid in the overthrow of such governments as those of Nicaragua, Honduras and the Dominican Republic, and to further the control of these and other neighboring republics by authoritarian governments of the extreme left.

The implications are grave. The treaty obligation of every American republic not to interfere "directly or indirectly" in the domestic affairs of its neighbors is being flagrantly violated. As merely one indication of the increasing contempt for this commitment, the Costa Rican dictatorship has publicly announced its payment of $100,000 to the Guatemalan government for the arms which the latter had furnished Figueres in order to insure the success of his revolution against his country's constitutional authorities.

The issue is not whether some one of the Governments whose overthrow is thus sought may in fact be a sorry travesty of democracy. The issue is whether the regional system known as the Organization of American States can survive if the fundamental principles on which it is founded are violated with impunity.

If every American republic adopts the policy of the Soviet Union and undertakes to decide what kind of governments its sovereign neighbors are to have, we will see no strong federation of 21 American republics cooperating for their common safety and welfare. We will see on the contrary a chaotic hemisphere ravaged by internecine conflicts and ripe for totalitarian domination. The history of inter-American relations shows conclusively that there can be neither friendship nor solidarity unless each republic is free from interference by its neighbors except when its national policies endanger the peace of the hemisphere.

IT WOULD be salutary if an investigation were made of the source of the large sums now being spent to make public opinion in the United States believe the contrary. To those unfamiliar with inter-American affairs the slick patter of some of our writers and commentators on Latin America who urge that the United States must help "democratic forces" eliminate "reactionary" governments in the Americas may sound plausible. Yet only four years ago we adopted such a policy in the case of Argentina. We thereby seriously prejudiced our own national interests as well as inter-American solidarity, and our policy was largely responsible for the setback from which Argentine democracy now suffers.

Democracy will become more firmly established in the continent as living standards rise, and as the force of public opinion makes itself increasingly felt. It will not be advanced by a resort to intervention and imposition by the United States or by Costa Rica, Guatemala and Venezuela.

The Inter-American Commission on Methods for the Peaceful Solution of Conflicts is now investigating the charge that Cuba abetted a revolution against the Dominican government. The commission could render the Organization of American States a service of even greater significance if it were further authorized to investigate recent acts of the governments of Costa Rica, Guatemala and Venezuela in order to determine whether those governments have violated their pledge of nonintervention, and whether, by infringing the sovereign rights of their neighbors, they are endangering the peace of the New World.

Presbyterian Clergy Opens Wedding Probe

A study of the practices of Washington Presbyterian clergymen in remarrying divorced persons was launched yesterday by the Presbytery of Washington City.

The ministers attending the fall meeting of the presbytery at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, 1301 New York ave. nw., were asked to fill out and return a questionnaire on marriage practices. Results will be announced at a future meeting.

The study was ordered by the presbytery May 10, following the re-marriage by a retired Presbyterian minister in Hollywood of film star Lana Turner and Dan Topping.

The questionnaire set forth as the ground for divorce a statement in the Westminster Confession of Faith, one of the church's basic documents. The Westminster Confession declares that "nothing but adultery, or such willful desertion as can no way be remedied by the church or civil magistrate, is cause sufficient of dissolving the bond of marriage . . ."

The clergymen were asked whether they ever united in marriage a person known to have been divorced.

If so, they were asked whether they limited such marriage to a person who "from the Scriptural viewpoint" is the innocent party.

Other questions asked whether a period of one year from the date of the divorce decree was required, and whether they would unite in marriage a person of another denomination when the other denomination prohibited the marriage.

They also were asked whether they would make exception when refusal would "do injustice to an innocent person who has been divorced for Scriptural reasons."

In other matters coming before the presbytery, the Rev. Lloyd G. Brown, director of the Westminster Foundation, said that at least two men were required to carry on programs at George Washington, Howard and Maryland Universities. Mr. Brown now handles the program alone.

The Rev. Ralph K. Merker, chairman of the restoration committee, reported that $330,589.08 of presbytery's quota of $347,012.76 had been pledged

Sawyer Urges Caution on Change to FOB

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer suggested last night that industry go slow about changing from basing point to FOB pricing systems.

He warned that large-scale changeovers could have "sharp repercussions" on prices, business and employment, forcing in some cases relocation of plants and "a consequent migration of workers."

The issue on which he spoke was raised to a boiling point by a recent Supreme Court decision outlawing the basing point system as practiced in the cement industry. The court said it resulted in illegal price-fixing.

Sawyer, observing that changeovers already being made have had an "unsettling" effect both on producers and purchasers, hinted it would be well to defer changing until Congress has finished a study of the situation.

Under the basing point system, a buyer is quoted uniform prices without regard to his distance from the producing plant. Under the FOB system, his cost is the price at the producing plant plus freight charges to his door.

The basing point system has been standard in many major industries besides cement, including steel, building materials, lumber and furniture.

Sawyer said in a statement that the Supreme Court decision in the cement case has other industries "confused" about what they are supposed to do now. He urged that "every businessman, every consumer, every community affected" study the economic effects of the Supreme Court decision and furnish information to a congressional committee.

Counsel Hails Citizens Units

Washington is one of the best "fun" cities in the country, and yet no one seems to run it, James R. Kirkland, counsel for the Senate District Committee, said last night.

Kirkland spoke at a meeting of the Shepherd Park Citizens Association in the Shepherd School, 14th and Kalmia sts. nw. He credited citizens' associations and the "right spirit of District residents with the civic-mindedness that makes the city tick."

District commissioners last night were urged to step up completion of the South Capitol st. bridge by the Fort Davis Citizens Association.

Takoma P-TA Gets Room Use

The mayor and city council of Takoma Park last night gave the "go" signal to the Parent-Teachers Association of the J. Enos Ray School to use the municipal building room at 8 Columbia ave. as a kindergarten for 80 children in shifts of 40 each.

The action was opposed vigorously by Councilman H. C. Heffner, welfare chairman in charge of the health and welfare center, who said that the building does not have space or sanitation facilities for 40 children and that a nursery school also in the building is limited by permit to only 20 children.

Ace Dies of Jet Crash Hurts

Los Angeles, Sept. 20 (AP).—Capt. James P. FitzGerald, 28, Air Force ace and among the first men to fly faster than sound, died today from injuries suffered in the crash-landing of his TF-80 jet plane September 9.

Captain FitzGerald's plane crashed near the Van Nuys airport as he was coming in from a landing after participating in the Bendix air races at Cleveland. The officer had been unconscious since the crash in Birmingham Veterans Hospital.

Born in South Pittsburgh, Tenn., he was graduated from West Point in 1943. He served with the Army's Eight Air Force in England during the war. He is survived by his widow and one child.

Mid-Air Explosion Scatters All-Jet Bomber Over 4 Miles

Tulare, Calif., Sept. 20 (AP).—One of the Nation's newest aerial weapons, a huge Air Force 500-mile-an-hour jet bomber, exploded today with a roar heard for miles.

The plane was a B-45, the Air Force's first all-jet bomber. Aboard were two civilian test pilots but no Air Force personnel. It crashed just outside Alpaugh, an isolated central California farming community some 20 miles south of here.

Two bodies were recovered from smouldering wreckage strewn over an area four miles square.

North American Aviation, makers of the plane, said George W. Krebs, 30, Los Angeles, project pilot of the plane, was at the controls. It said the other man aboard was Nicholas G. Pickard, 31-year-old test pilot.

The B-45 was one of 190 in military order with North American, but the company would not say how many had been delivered to the Muroc Air Force experimental base, or comment on the crash. The first was accepted last spring, after nearly two years of preliminary tests.

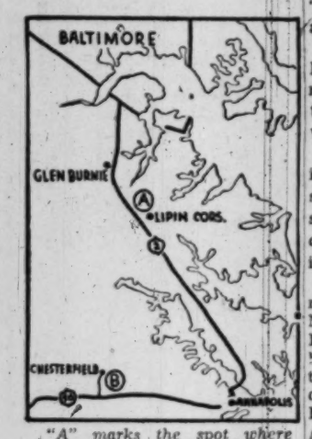
Md. Couple's Bodies Found

the assumption that the car had been used to convey them.

Substantiating this were blood stains on the car and at the scene where the bodies were found, as well as automobile tire tracks, Chief Souers said.

The Associated Press reported earlier that a county road employe, George Asquith, found the bodies after more than 1000 volunteers had combed the area surrounding Glen Burnie Sunday and yesterday.

Asquith found the bodies when he got off a grader he was using



"A" marks the spot where Mahlan's automobile was found. "B" shows where the bodies were found on the narrow Chesterfield rd., which leads off the Defense hwy. near the North River.

Chief Souers said his investigation showed that the man had apparently been thrown out the right side of the car and the girl out the left.

Asquith said he drove his road grader to a county road shop where Luke Paul, superintendent, notified Eastport police. Paul said Asquith was so frightened at finding the bodies that he was almost incoherent.

Albert Bembe, 33-year-old former county policemen, was one of the first persons to reach the scene.

He said the body of Miss Kline was on its back. Mahlan was lying on his right side, his left hand up over his face and knees drawn up.

Bembe said there was room enough at the spot to turn a car around.

In the vicinity of Glen Burnie, near Marley's Creek, police inspected an abandoned house splotched with bloodstains, it was reported.

Police found in the house battered pieces of furniture, all heavily covered with dust except one ancient bed. It was surrounded by splotched blood.

A trail of bloodstains led from the bed to the front door of the ramshackle building.

Fred Schiropper, resident of a waterfront cottage some distance from the shack, was reported as having heard two shots about 11 p. m. Friday.

Chief Souers said last night that the bodies had been taken to Baltimore City Morgue for an autopsy. He said police had not determined whether the girl was raped.

Police said laboratory tests were under way to determine whether Mahlan and Miss Kline both shed blood in the car. There were bullet holes in the front of the automobile, bloodstains in the front section, and a pool of blood in the rear of the car near a shoe belonging to the girl.

Tests also were undertaken to decide if a footprint marked in blood and sand in the car was made by Mahlan's shoe.

Mahlan, a war veteran who worked as a clerk in the Glen Burnie postoffice, was last seen Friday night when he and Miss Kline left her home at 203 2d ave. in Glen Burnie to "take a drive."

They had known each other for about two years and had dates once or twice a week according to friends.

A friend of red-haired Miss Kline, who worked as a secretary of the Koppers Co. in Glen Burnie, said the girl's mother discovered about 4 a. m. Saturday that her daughter had not returned.

She immediately went over to the Mahlan house, about two blocks away at 114 4th ave., and found that young Mahlan had not returned from their date.

The mothers then notified police and there began one of the biggest manhunts in Maryland history—one in which private citizens, Boy Scouts, servicemen and police from surrounding districts participated. Automobiles, spotter planes and bloodhounds were pressed into service, and some 1000 persons searched the fields and woods near the scene where the car was found.

D. C. Traffic Toll Lowest in Nation, Fleming Discloses

Salt Lake City, Sept. 20 (U.P.)—Highway fatalities are decreasing despite increasing motor vehicle travel, Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Agency administrator, told the American Association of State Highway Officials at its thirty-fourth annual convention today.

Fleming said recent estimates indicate that the national traffic-death rate has dropped from 12 per 10 million travel miles at the beginning of 1946 to less than 7 during the early part of 1948.

Widespread action brought about by the President's Highway Safety Conference in 1946 accounts for the reduction, according to Fleming.

He said the fight against traffic accidents was still far from being won. Many States have fatality rates much higher than the national average. Alabama, with a rate of 12.6 and South Carolina with 12.4 top the list.

The District of Columbia has the lowest rate—3.2.

A Literate Man Muses on Drama

By Richard L. Coe

JOHN MASON BROWN is celebrated on two counts. He is one of the few pure essayists on the American scene today, and he is the Nation's most economical dramatic critic.

The way this Kentucky boy can go to the theater and make a thing of it is staggering. The play may become just the take-off point for Brown's gregarious memory; he's been able to begin a review of "Alice in Wonderland" with a Fourth of July panegyric, his recent referances to the Lambs suggest that a book on Charles and Mary is on the way to the printers.

And the essays themselves, as they originally appear in the Saturday Review, become not only the basis for his crowed lecture halls across the country, but each year wind up in book form as a gentle sketch of theatrical history. His latest, which this time he calls "Seeing MORE Things," is just out and is, as usual, filled with literate charm.

Don't for a minute suppose that this perforce more pointed, less literate daily reviewer resents critic Brown's enormous success at retailing his experiences. Quite the contrary. Brown's ability to turn his two-on-the aisle into a magazine-book-radio-lecturehall-television goldfield has my unqualified admiration.

And he labors hard at it, working out several ways of saying the same thing over and over in one sentence. This is Brown's most conspicuous habit as to style and it can be irritating.

Like the late Woollcott, he also relishes overstatement: "So far as Miss Merman's career is concerned, Irving Berlin's new exhibit must be set down as a test comparable to the perhaps slightly more percussive one soon to take place at Bikini."

A Civilized Man

Brown, as I say, is fond of making statements like this, the pith of their weakness being that while they may be suitable for newspaper or magazine writing, they're pretty sticky in the permanence of a book. That is his zestful economy, true, but clapping magazine pieces, however charming, into book form is likely to emphasize this stylistic puffiness.

Nor is his insistence on subdividing his reviews and musings into such loosely descriptive headings as "Muse of Fire," "Film and Fact," "Night Watch" and "Overture" likely to fool anyone that his excerpts were written with the cohesive book form in mind.

Still, Brown's collection is welcome. For it is literate, it leads the reader into the musings of a man who is interested in any number of things; it has the air of an affectionate, discriminating theatergoer, and it revives the fine art of essay writing. "Seeing More Things" is a leisurely, energetic journey with a civilized man.

Girl, 11, Identifies James

bogast, a Baltimore housewife and mother of six children.

Mrs. Arbogast said on the day of July 6 she was sitting on the front porch of her home on Winter ave. combing her hair.

She said she observed a man walk slowly by her house. He was carrying a long-bladed butcher knife, she testified, and at the moment was using it to whittle a stick.

She said he was walking north (in the direction of the murder scene) and was wearing blue dungarees.

"He looked like Joe Louis," she said. She, too, pointed out James in the courtroom.

Houston and James' Baltimore attorney, William H. Murphy, attempted to shake witnesses in their identification of the knife and blue dungarees.

However, one witness, Mrs. Minnie Charson, positively identified the dungarees. How did she know them? She had given them to James, she said.

Mrs. Charson said she first saw James on June 25 when he passed by her house. She said she asked him if he wanted work and hired him to paint her front porch and some furniture.

The State also called Dr. Howard J. Maldies, chief medical examiner of Baltimore, who described the wound that caused Marsha Brill's death, and Dr. Henry C. Freimuth, city toxicologist, who testified he had examined a shirt worn by James and found on it a human bloodstain.

Dr. Marvin M. Graham, Baltimore dentist, related how he had stopped on Glen ave., where the child was stabbed, placed her in his car and rushed her to the nearest doctor's office.

The doctor was absent from his office so an ambulance was called and she was taken to a hospital where she died.

Alan H. Murrell and Anselm Sodaro, assistants to the State's Attorney of Baltimore, who are prosecuting the case, are expected to call Capt. Oscar Lusby, head of Baltimore's Northern District police, tomorrow as a witness. Through his testimony they hope to get James' statement admitted as evidence.

At the request of the defense, the case is being heard without a jury before Judge Herman M. Moser.

Plan to Improve Gallinger

tuberculosis sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., asks $1,922,000 for next fiscal year's operating expenses. This is $14,000 higher than the present fiscal year's operating requirements.

Seek Capital Outlay

In addition, the Health Department requested a capital outlay appropriation of $10,000 to furnish the new four-unit apartment house construeted there for medical officers. Estimated costs of the furnishings, at $2500 a unit, were based on present prices of the needed furnishings, Dr. Ruhland said.

Proposed salary increases include requests to give the District Commissioners discretion to raise to a ceiling of $8095 the salary of the hospital's deputy superintendent. The position now pays $7581 a year.

Also: New salary ranges (not to exceed five) of the hospital's six full-time chief medical officers, now receiving $7581 each, to between $8179 and $9376, and a new salary range of $7102 to $8059 a year for the hospital's two associate medical officers, now being paid $5905 a year.

The request specified that the positions be removed from Civil Service status and that the medical men be given promotional increases within the limitations of the new proposed salary ranges "in the discretion of the Commissioners."

Lower Brackets Included

The Gallinger Hospital budget request also contained provisions of lesser hospital employes, including eight kitchen helpers, 10 domestic attendants, one assistant pathologist, six laboratory aides, 13 head nurses, 15 practical nurses and 50 hospital attendants, all described as "vitally needed for continued efficient operation of the hospital."

The budget for food needs for the next fiscal year was set at $538,594 or $135,004 above the current operating budget for such provisions. It was estimated this would provide menus at 85 cents a hospital day, in contrast to present feedings averaging 73.2 cents for the day's three meals.

Also included in operating cost category was a request for $38,000 to repair and install water mains and fire hydrants at Gallinger. The hospital has frequently been scored by inspectors for lack of such facilities to safeguard the institution.

The budget's request for $1,431,565 for the pediatrics and crippled children's building would augment $618,435 already available by congressional appropriations for the long-delayed project. A similar request for the added funds was shelved at the past session of Congress.

Yesterday's request did not take into account a recent request of $400,000 from Hill-Burton Federal funds to help in construction of the building. Henry S. Gavens, administrative officer of the Health Department, explained that the budget needs were drawn up before the District decided to ask for the special grant.

Future action, he said, rests with the District Commissioners and whether or not the Public Health Service will authorize the $400,000 grant.

SOME FUN—"The King's Jester" seems to be having in the Italian-made film of Victor Hugo's play, "Le Roi s'amuse," but if you know the story of "Rigoletto," you know his is a hard lot. Michel Simon is the jester, Doris Duranti a courtesan in the film opening tomorrow at the Dupont

DON BARRY, whose nickname, as any of his fans can tell you, is "Red," is touring the Lust circuit these nights, finishing up at Rockville's Milo tonight and opening a three-day stay at the Drive-In at Beltsville Wednesday. . . . Red's "Red Ryder' series led to more action pictures for Republic, including "Train to Alcatraz," "Madonna of the Desert" and "Lightning in the Forest." . . . With him on his jaunt is a company of cowboy entertainers. . . . Saturday the troupe will double between the Cheverly and the Cameo.

"THE CLANDESTINE MARRIAGE" began a two-week run last night in Alexandria's Gadsby's Tavern. . . . This is the Alexandria Little Theater's annual sweep into Colonial times, youthful period of the old inn ballroom, where dramas of the eighteenth century are performed in as authentic a setting as can be managed. . . . Sorry, there's nothing we can do about getting you tickets for the plays. . . . They're all subscribed for, though Mrs. William F. Todd, Overlook 6268, may be able to help you.

BALTIMORE began its winter season last night with the opening of "For Love or Money" at Ford's. . . . That city's summer theater is still working, too, though this is the final week for Don Swann's Hilltop Theater, where the play is "George Washington Slept Here." . . . Two live theaters—not bad, huh, for the sleepy old town that's 40 miles from the Capital of the Nation, where none exists?

THE THEATER GUILD, which, in the past 20 years has stated several times that it's going in the movie business, seems to have made a surer step in that direction than usual. . . . Guild Co-Directors Lawrence Langner and Theresa Helburn and Robert Montgomery of Neptune Films, Inc., have signed an agreement to produce films. . . . Announcement of the first two pictures is expected shortly and a third is likely to be a stage piece which Montgomery will either play or direct and which will then be made as a picture. . . . The Guild's talked bravely of making pictures before and it will be interesting to see if, with all its other business now at hand, the dream comes true.

Thirteen Indicted In Numbers Probe

Thirteen persons were indicted yesterday as members of Washington's numbers racket fraternity.

The indictments were returned in District Court by the regular grand jury. A special grand jury has been sitting intermittently since May in a widespread investigation of a reported 100-million-dollar gambling business in Washington.

Among these indicted were three men and three women arrested on a raid July 26 in what police said was a numbers headquarters at 1006 7th st. ne. Seized were three adding machines, a radio, a trunk, $400 and numerous numbers slips, horse race bets and rundown tape.

Alvin Jeter, 43, 1768 U st. nw., was charged with street corner activity as a lottery operator.

Those charged in this case with possessing numbers slips, setting up a gaming table and permitting a gaming table to be operated, are Joseph A. Chase, 42, 1842 2nd st. nw.; Julius Smith, 47, 54 53rd st. se.; Theresa E. Chase, 24, 1842 2nd st. nw.; Bernice Budd, 425 M st. nw.; Ernestine S. Chichester, 3529 10th st. nw., and Daniel W. Cunningham, 37, 637 8th st. ne.

Three others were arrested September 9 in a raid on the Liberty Cafe, 804 K st. nw. Charged with possession of numbers slips and operating a lottery, they are Louise C. Newyahr, 43, 901 New York ave. nw.; Bernard Newyahr, 29, 901 New York ave. nw., and Hyman Sussman, 43, 3215 Chesapeake st. nw.

Charge Sales to Police

John Walker, 44, of 1315 Park rd. nw., was charged with operating a lottery there. Police said he had a small numbers business, and was apprehended after he sold bets to undercover policemen.

Lee Woods, 67, of 1125 N st. nw., was charged with operating a lottery at a District grill.

James S. Tasker, 48, a janitor at 1740 Euclid st. nw., was charged as a lottery operator.

ing $1200 a day business . . . that business dwindled to $400 a day and that every time he inquired, his trail would lead to Roger Simkins and he went to the Brass Rail looking for Simkins or possibly 'Shep' Shapiro."

Murray's efforts later to substantiate the charges made in his opening address were blocked as irrelevant.

The blinds were pulled down on the numbers angle of the case as Murray attempted to question Odessa Marie Madre, 1719 1st st. nw., a self-styled former numbers bookie.

Defense Objects

When Murray began quizzing the woman about a conversation he said she had with Leake three weeks after the shooting, Defense Attorney Curtis Mitchell leaped to his feet with an objection.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut called all counsel to the bench for a conference, following which Miss Madre was dismissed from the stand.

Murray said later the questioning was ruled out "at this time" as irrelevant. He indicated that if he could develop the theme that numbers testimony was necessary to show a motive for the shootings, the line of questioning might be allowable.

Nicknames Bring Snickers

The bizarre nicknames of many of Washington's "sporting" element brought chuckles from the courtroom as, earlier, Murray asked prospective jurors if they had ever heard of: Jewboy Dietz (Abe Plisco), Puddinhead Jones (Alfred T. Jones), Jack the Bear (Jeff Thomas), Greasy Mike Mallette, Dizzy Vance, Scar Polson, Bernard (Slim) Hall, Cracker Bowman, Sporty Johnson, Emmett and Leo Warring and Sam Beard.

Murray said Isadore (Shep) Shapiro, reputed gambler, is among other witnesses slated to be called by the Government.

Others to testify yesterday included two policemen who arrived at the cafe following the shooting and Cornelius Parker, 150 Seaton pl. nw., who is said to be a witness of the cafe shooting.

Commons ODs Check on Lords' Veto Powers

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—The House of Commons approved tonight without a record vote a bill to restrict the veto powers of the House of Lords to one year instead of the present two.

The action accomplished one of the major projects of the special session of parliament. Just before passage a Conservative amendment to throw out the legislation was rejected, 319 to 192.

The bill was passed at a previous session of Commons but the Lords rejected it, and are expected to do so again. After that Commons may make the bill a law by passing it a third time at the next session.

Once the vote power of the House of Lords is trimmed, proposed legislation to nationalize Britain's iron and steel industry could be approved promptly by Parliament.

Imported Thugs Wielded Guns In Beach Stickup, Police Hold

Virginia Beach, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—Police Chief Ivan Mapp of Princess Anne County said today he believed local men planned the Boat House holdup near here and imported gunmen to execute it.

Seven masked men armed with rifles and a submachine gun robbed about 40 men of cash and jewelry between 3 and 4 a. m. Sunday. The victims, Mapp, said, were attending a private stag party given by Jimmy Fox of Virgina Beach, owner of the Boat House.

Mapp today said the value of cash and jewelry stolen by the gunmen "may have been as high as $15,000." He previously had estimated the total at $2500.

He said tonight it was "absolutely impossible" to estimate "the exact amount that was taken by the gunmen."

Mapp said he had no substantial leads and indicated he was not getting "a great deal" of cooperation from the victims.

Portsmouth police reported that one man carrying $26,000 in cash saved his money by hiding in the attic of the Boat House. Two other men also concealed themselves in the attic.

G W Medics Told Research Need Acute

Particular interest in research for basic knowledge, in preventive medicine for an aging population and in public health was recommended yesterday to the new freshmen class of George Washington University Medical School.

The suggestion was offered by Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, at an assembly opening the 125th year of the eleventh oldest medical school in the United States. Classes open today for the school's 325 students, including 95 freshmen, three of whom are women and eight of whom are veterans. The freshmen were selected from 3000 applicants.

Declaring there is an acute shortage of medical investigators and medical health officers in research institutions and health departments all over the country, Dr. Scheele said, "There is no greater challenge to intellectual and social pioneering in our age than research and preventive medicine." More students, he said, should go in for psychiatry to help solve new problems arising from the rising population—age level.

Dr. Bloedorn told how the school recently has added facilities for cancer research and treatment in its affiliation with the Warwick Memorial Clinic and the new cancer-detection clinic at the George Washington University Hospital, supported by a grant from the District of Columbia Cancer Society.

Garfinckel's Sales and Net Climb in Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net sales of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., rose 8.5 per cent in the fiscal year ended July 31 over the previous 12 months, the annual pamphlet report to stockholders showed yesterday.

Net income totaled $966,692 for the fiscal year, equal to $2.64 a common share. In the previous year net of $948,424 was equivalent to $2.86 a common share. The net per share was lower this year, a company spokesman said, because of four full quarterly dividends having been paid on the 4½ per cent preferred stock this year. In the previous fiscal period, three quarterly dividends were paid on this new class of stock.

Net sales aggregated $21,865,263, against $20,135,298 in the previous year. Net operating income, before provision for District and Federal income taxes, totaled $1,618,692, against $1,630,917. Provision for taxes this year was $652,000, against $682,493.

Sales at the Spring Valley store at Massachusetts ave. and Fordham rd. continued to increase, the report stated, a new record having been made in each of the six years' operation. Additional floor area of 9000 square feet on the second floor has been fixtured and merchandised.

Brooks Brothers, the subsidiary in New York City, has shown "considerable progress and sales have substantially increased." A new factory for the manufacture of clothing is now in use, it was stated, "and should result in more efficient operation and production."

Garfinckel's balance sheet as of July 31, 1948, showed current assets of $8,805,468 and current liabilities of $2,559,888, or a current ratio of 3.4 to 1.

The report was signed by Richard P. Dunn as board chairman and William E. Schmid as president.

CONTINUED GAINS—Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported August gas sales totaled 6,832,973 therms, a gain of 7.29 per cent over the same 1947 month. For the first eight months this year sales aggregated 105,914,848 therms, a new record for that period and 17.81 per cent higher than in the same period last year.

WILL AWARD PRIZES: Graduation certificates and scholarship prizes will be awarded tonight at the annual dinner of the women's division of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. More than 300 women members and guests are expected to attend the affair in the Mayflower. Miss M. Patricia McShane, chairman of the Women's Committee, will preside and Miss Virginia Valentine of the State Planters Bank & Trust Co., Richmond, will be principal speaker. Robert H. Lacey, president of the D. C. Bankers Association and Herbert Lawson, president of the A. I. B. chapter, will be among guests.

ANTI-INFLATION MOVES: Two measures adopted by the Government to fight inflation were put into effect yesterday. These were installment buying controls revived by the Federal Reserve Board on purchases from $50 to $5000, and the new higher interest rate on one-year Treasury certificates. The Treasury opened subscription books on the new offering with an interest rate of 1¼ per cent. The old rate was 1⅛.

ODD LOTS: Sales of retail drug stores in July amounted to 304 million dollars, a new record for that month, Commerce Department reported . . . Air Force officials here said a 23-million-dollar contract for bombing navigational equipment has been awarded to AC Sparkplug division of General Motors . . . ICC yesterday authorized New York Central Railroad to issue $13,800,000 of equipment trust certificates . . . Crosley Motors, Inc., set a new company production record in August when its Marion, Ind., assembly plant turned out 3857 passenger and commercial cars . . . H. L. Walters, Washington zone manager headed Nash dealers of the Washington area in a visit to New York City to preview two new lines of 1949 cars. Nash is carefully concealing details of 1949 cars.

RETURN FROM PARLEY: Sixty-three top utility executives returned to Washington yesterday after attending the 24th annual fall conference of the Maryland Utilities Commission over the weekend at Virginia Beach. Alfred G. Neil, W. Roy Dunn and R. W. Wilson headed a delegation of 30 from Potomac Electric Power Co. There were 18 representatives from Washington Gas Light Co., nine from Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., three from Capital Transit Co. and three from the local Public Utilities Commission. Dunn presided at the Friday session and H. Randolph Maddox of the local telephone company spoke Saturday morning on current public utilities problems.

MAY CHANGE RULES: The Securities and Exchange Commission is considering changing regulations governing stabilization of new stock issues. The move results from an ill-fated offering by the Kaiser-Frazer Corp. last February 3, SEC said. At that time the motor car company purchased 186,200 shares of its own stock while attempting to sell 1,500,000 new shares. The stock offering later was withdrawn. SEC explained that stabilization is the legal process whereby the market price of a security is pegged before or during a public offering—thus preventing or retarding a price decline while the offering is in effect. The commission gave interested persons until November 1 to submit views and comments on possible changes.

Suit Charges Tip In Foundry Sale

The War Assets Administration gave Kaiser-Frazer Corp. an "exclusive, inside tip" which enabled Kaiser-Frazer to buy the Government-built iron works at the Republic Steel Corp. plant in Cleveland, a suit filed yesterday in District Court here charged.

The Wheland Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn., in a suit against War Assets and Surplus Property Administrator Jess Larson, asks the court to set aside the sale, which has not yet been completed. The petition for a declaratory injunction asserts the Wheland Co. has been harmed by sale of the plant to Kaiser-Frazer, and charges Larson acted beyond his powers in not giving Wheland notice the plant was to be sold.

The Wheland Co. operates a foundry making parts for automobiles, household and farming equipment. It said it needs 6000 tons of pig iron a month to operate at full capacity. The foundry is now operating at only 60 per cent of capacity, and to reach that, the suit states, it has to pay "exorbitant prices in the gray market," here and abroad.

Wheland says that after Republic Steel's application to buy the iron works, known as Stack 5, had been rejected, Wheland informed Larson it would like to buy the plant and was told it would not be immediately available for sale.

While Wheland was making other inquiries looking toward purchase of the plant so it could produce its own pig iron, the suit alleges, WAA gave "immediate, private and exclusive notice" to Kaiser-Frazer that the plant was for sale, and then gave Kaiser-Frazer a 30-day option to purchase the plant at a $15,200,000 base price, or lease it for 20 years at $800,000 a year.

The suit asks the court to adjudicate that the sale is improper, and decree it null and void.

A Ribbon for Jody

KICK-OFF—C. Girard Davidson, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, pins a feathered ribbon on Jody Miller, the Miss Washington of 1948, at ceremonies launching the Government Unit's Community Chest Campaign yesterday

Government Chest Drive Opens

The Government Unit of the 1949 Community Chest Campaign got off to a flying start yesterday in its drive for $1,524,557 from Federal workers, with a noontime kickoff meeting in the Interdepartmental Auditorium.

About 1500 volunteer campaign workers heard Chest officials outline the whys and wherefores of the 1949 Red Feather drive for a total goal of $4,500,000 from Greater Washington residents.

C. Girard Davidson, chairman of the Government unit and Assistant Secretary of the Interior, asked volunteers to stress the slogan, "Give a Day's Pay" with workers who earn under $5000 a year. He said employes earning over $5000 would be asked to contribute 1 per cent of their yearly earnings to the drive.

The increased budget for this year's Chest in Greater Washington "was carefully put together by competent, honest people after open hearings," Col. Chauncey Parker, chairman of the Greater Washington Chest campaign, told the group.

Funds for local hospitals, whose services have been increasingly in demand, were doubled this year, Colonel Parker said. Inflation has addd an estimated 10 per cent to last year's operation costs, he pointed out, and reactivation of the United Service Organizations, to entertain selective service trainees, has also helped increase the budget.

Other speakers at the meeting were William G. Gilks, Government Unit manager, and Arthur H. Kruse, new director of the United Community Services, which replaces both the Washington unit of the Community Chest and the former Council of Social Agencies.

Surprise visitors at the starting rally were Miss Jody Miller, Miss Washington of 1948, and Mike Hunnicutt of radio station WOL. Miss Miller sang.

Chest workers in more than 85 Government departments and agencies will start asking for contributions Wednesday.

Business Unit I will meet at 12:15 p. m. today in the Washington Hotel for an "instruction" meeting, according to its chairman, Herbert J. Rich.

The Special Gifts Unit, whose chairman is E. Cortlandt Parker, meets at 6:30 p. m. today in the Parrot Restaurant, 1701 20th st. nw.

CHEWING-GUM LAXATIVE

● At last a laxative so pleasant, so different, that it has won millions who now refuse to take harsh, stomach-punishing laxatives!

FEEN-A-MINT tastes like delicious, mint-flavored chewing gum. And you chew it like gum! And scientists say chewing makes FEEN-A-MINT's fine medicine more effective — "readies" it so it flows gently and gradually into the system.

And here's the amazing thing! The action of FEEN-A-MINT's special medicine REFOURS the stomach. It doesn't act while in the stomach, but only when farther along in the lower digestive tract . . . where it should! Thus, FEEN-A-MINT won't upset the stomach!

TRY FEEN-A-MINT—at any drug counter — for 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢

Japan Seeks to Sell 30,000 Tons of Iron

Tokyo, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Japanese government has called for bids by September 30 on 30,000 tons of pig iron.

Bids may be for 10,000 tons or more and must stipulate the price asked in United States currency or pounds sterling.

Bidders will be required to provide a performance bond for 20 per cent of the total amount of the sale before Allied headquarters will approve the contract.

Bankers Urged to Back Anti-Inflation Moves

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—Senator A. Willis Robertson, speaking at the thirty-eighth annual meeting of Group A, Virginia Bankers Association, said efforts by various Federal agencies to curb inflation to prove effective must be backed and supplemented by the Nation's bankers.

Warning against the idea that inflation might cure itself, Senator Robertson said he opposes strict controls on business. He urged voluntary restraint on the part of businessmen and labor, calling attention to spending faster than they are able to produce.

Robertson is a member of the Banking and Currency Committee.

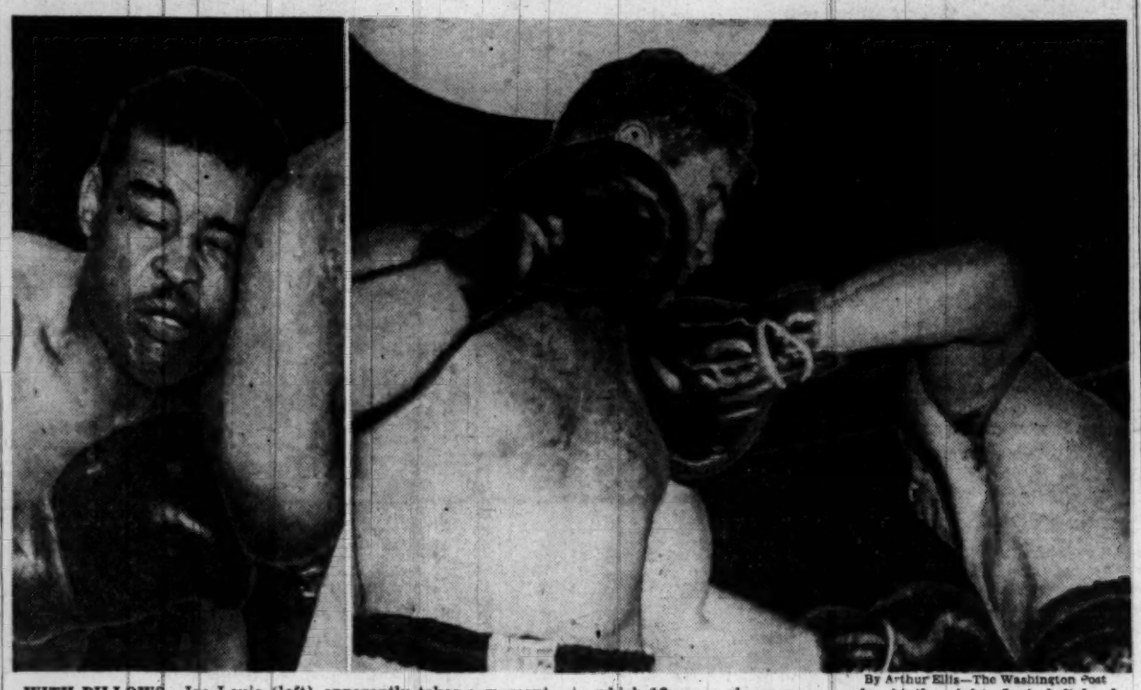
Indians, Yanks and Bosox All Win, Keep Race Hot



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Cleveland Defeats A's, By 6-3 for Sixth in Row

Cleveland, Sept. 20 (AP).—Cleveland's revived Indians maintained their spot one-half game behind the league-leading Boston Red Sox tonight, defeating the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 3, before a crowd of 44,442.

The win was the Tribe's sixth straight and its thirteenth in the last 15 games.

Tonight's loss meant that the best Philadelphia can do in the American Leageue is to tie for first place. To do that, they will have to win all of their remaining 7 games, while Boston loses its final 10.

Southpaw Gene Bearden blanked the As with eight well-scattered hits for the first six innings, but ran into trouble in the seventh when the Mackmen tallied all three of their runs.

The Indians entered the seventh with a 4-to-0 lead. Singles by Pinch-batter Carl Scheib, Pete Suder and Eddie Joost plated one run. Another single by Barney McCosky and a walk to Ferris Fain filled the bases and Bearden was lifted in favor of Russ Christopher.

The lanky relief artist walked Ray Coleman to force in Joost. Chapman beat out a roller to deep short to send McCosky across with the third run, but Christopher ended the rally by forcing Don White to fly out.

The Athletics outhit the Indians, 14 to 11, but the Tribesmen gave their pitchers excellent support, turning in five double plays for a season total of 17.

Joe Gordon drove in three of the Cleveland runs with a single, double and home run. The Tribe second sacker's round-tripper in the seventh was his twenty-ninth of the season.

Bearden's win was his sixteenth against seven losses.

Tonight's game completed the season's competition between the Athletics and the Indians, with the Indians winning 16 out of 22 games.

Dodgers Win 4-2, Take Over Second Place

Brooklyn, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers gave Hank Borowy the works in the first inning, coming up with four runs, and Preacher Roe made it stand up the rest of the way today to beat the Chicago Cubs, 4-2 and break the second place tie with the idle St. Louis Cardinals.

The victory moved the Dodgers up to within five and a half games of the front-running Boston Braves who were rained out of their game with the Cincinnati Reds.

Cliff Chambers, tall lefthander, relieved Borowy with two out in the first and pitched no-hit ball through seven innings before Carl Furillo singled in the eighth.

Mexico City, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Mexican Baseball League officially announced today its disbandment because clubs lost too much money. Players have been drifting away lately, evidently thinking the ship was going down.

Champion Favored

Marcel Cerdan Goes After Tony Zale's Title Tonight

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 20 (U.P.).—Champion Tony Zale and Marcel Cerdan, French challenger, are scheduled to meet tomorrow night at Roosevelt Stadium in the first international fight for the undisputed world middleweight title in 21 years.

Not since Mickey Walker knocked out England's Tommy Milligan at London in 1927 has the undivided 160-pound crown been the prize in an international scrap.

When Zale of Gary, Ind., squares off against the Frenchman from Casablanca, Morocco, the action will occur about two miles from the site of Boyle's 30 acres, where the Franco-American classic between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier attracted the ring's first $1,000,000 gate in 1921.

Carpentier and Dempsey will be among the probable 25,000 fans as Cerdan—the 32-year-old "French Tiger" who is middleweight champion of Europe—attempts to wrest the world crown from 34-year-old Zale.

When they weigh in tomorrow noon at the Jersey City Gardens, each will scale just under the 160-pound limit, according to their trainers.

Statuesque, brown-haired, battle-scarred Zale was favored at 7½ to 5 to make a successful first defense of the crown he recaptured from Rocky Graziano at Newark, N. J., on June 10. That Newark bout, incidentally, was the first promotional venture of the newly organized Tournament of Champions, Inc.

The Zale-Graziano bout suffered a 24-hour postponement because of rain, but the weather forecast for tomorrow night indicated that the T. of C. would have better luck with its second promotion. The forecast was "fair and cool."

However, tomorrow night's show suffered one "bad break" that unquestionably will affect the gate. The supporting heavyweight bout between Gus Lesnevich and Jersey Joe Walcott was canceled Friday because Lesnevich broke a toe. Gus and Jersey Joe were slated for 15 rounds, the same number as Zale and Cerdan.

Squad Down to 38

'Skins Release Two; Todd, Livingston Will Play Opener

The Washington Redskins yesterday started final preparations for Sunday's National League opener by slashing two players from their squad.

Little Sammy Behr of Maryland and Big Bill Russ of Rice Institute, both backs, were victims. The team was thus left with 38 players, three over the limit which must be observed before the Tribe gallops into Griffith Stadium to meet the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Behr, a 165-pound halfback, was expected to join the Wilmington (Del.) Clippers for more seasoning. Releasing the tiny star was painful to the 'Skins, who are still high on him but forced to admit he lacks the weight. Fullback Russ was 205 pounds of dead weight on a club that now lists four fine fullbacks.

The three additional players who must go, is was indicated, will be linemen. Two of these may be ends, the 'Skins now being possessed of eight wingmen.

Their third preseason loss in a row, instead of dampening Redskin morale, left the locals in a hilarious mood. Sunday's 17-14 loss to the Chicago Bears, they felt, was a good demonstration of Washington power in the line, budding defense against passes and an attack that might go like a whirlwind with the return of four injured backs.

All-America Harry Gilmer wasn't listed as a starter against the Steelers, come Sunday, but it was certain he'd be able to play, if badly needed. Howie Livingston and Dick Todd were expected to be in shape, leaving only Scatback Eddie Saenz on the major casualty list.

Slingin' Sammy Baugh wasn't feeling too well, however. The leg he hurt in Birmingham against the Green Bay Packers was still acting up, but timeless Sammy will need something more than an ache to make him idle or ineffective.

Louis Gives Pat a Lesson; Wright Wins

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis was held to "no decision" last night, but put on a fine display of boxing in the second Griffith Stadium appearance of his career

A crowd of 9788 turned out, paying a gross $25,970.43, net $19,344.52.

In the night's principal piece of real fighting, Smuggy Hursey, Washington middleweight, dropped a unanimous 10-round decision to his former sparring partner, Al Wright.

Louis, at 216, two pounds heavier than when he last defended his title against Jersey Joe Walcott, traded punches freely with his husky foe from Paterson, N. J.

Both lost their tempers a little in the fourth round when a small welt began to show under the champ's left eye, and they flailed away with their 16-ounce pillows.

Louis' stabbing left, even when he pulled his punches, seemed capable of setting Comiskey on his pants. He kept his right sheathed for the most part, but the few times he used it even "softly," Comiskey was jarred.

In the Hursey-Wright fight, Smuggy was the favorite before they crawled into the ring, but Wright made Hursey look pretty foolish.

Wright, 161, used a 2½-pound weight edge to advantage, bulled the claimant to the D. C. title from corner to corner, and made it convincing with a devastating onslaught in the final round.

Hursey was in trouble in the first round when he stepped into a looping right and took some time to get the rubber out of his legs.

In the fifth, Hursey's ineffectiveness reached a peak when he brought up an undercut that hit nothing but air and the Smug fell flat on his back.

The program opened with a scorcher in which Gene Harley, 148½, took a unanimous four-round decision over Miles Jones, 145. Another all-local tiff went to 134-pound Garland Edwards with a decision ove Holly Mims, 151.

New York's Jerry Meklir, 138½, was a half pound lighter than local boy Ken Baker, but a whale of a lot better. Meklir scored a knockout in 2:15 of the second round of a scheduled six. Elkins Brothers, 188, of Washington, suffered a cut eyebrow in the first heat of his six-rounder with Tiger Roy Taylor, 183½, of New York, but had enough power for a unanimous verdict.

Boston Belts Tigers, 7-2, Holds Half Game Lead

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox held fast to their American League lead today, slapping the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 2, after a shaky start as left-hander Mickey Harris held Detroit to four scattered hits, all singles.

Two bad errors, one of them by Second Baseman Lou Stringer, who flew in today from Hollywood, Calif., to join the Red Sox, gave Detroit a pair of unearned runs in the opening inning for a 2-1 lead, but the Tigers promptly fell apart; the Red Sox took heart and won going away.

Harris walked nine men, but was airtight in the clutches as Detroit loaded the bases twice in the late innings without scoring.

Hutchinson Is Shelled

Meanwhile, Boston shellacked Freddie Hutchinson for a dozen hits, four of them by Dom DiMaggio and another Vern Stephens' twenty-eighth home run of the season.

The Sox bunched nine of their blows in the first four innings for six runs, more than enough to slap down the upstart Tigers who rose up to whip the league leaders twice yesterday.

DiMaggio Homers as Yanks Win by 8-7

St. Louis, Sept. 20 (AP).—The New York Yankees staggered to an 8-7 victory over the lowly St. Louis Browns today to remain a game behind the American League front-running Boston Red Sox in the fierce pennant battle.

The triumph also temporarily enabled the Yanks to move into a second place tie with the Cleveland Indians. The Indians are scheduled to meet the Philadelphia Athletics in Cleveland tonight.

Joe DiMaggio, despite a painful charley horse, which handicapped his fielding, led the Yankees at bat. The Yankee Clipper poled his thirty-ninth homer of the season in the fourth inning and drove in what proved to be the winning runs when he singled with the bases loaded in the eighth inning. The three runs batted in boosted his total for the season to 148.

Caps Open Season Against Warriors Here on Nov. 3

New York, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—President Maurice Podoloff of the Professional Basketball Association of America announced tonight that the league will open its 1948 season with the Indianapolis Jets entertaining the St. Louis Bombers November 1.

With the BAA expanded this season to 12 teams by the addition of Indianapolis, the Minneapolis Lakers, the Rochester Royals and the Fort Wayne Pistons, the association will play a 360-game slate, each team playing 60 games.

Fort Wayne will open its home season November 3 against the New York Knickerbockers, and the Washington Caps wil be at home to the Philadelphia Warriors on the same night.

Three more clubs will make their initial appearances before home town fans on November 4. The Baltimore Bullets will play host to Minneapolis, the Warriors to the Boston Celtics, and the Providence Steamrollers to the Capitals.

Aussies Quitting? Decision Later

Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—Acting President Henry A. Pitt told the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia today that reports that the Aussies would not challenge for the Davis Cup in 1949 "are entirely without foundation."

Pitt said that a decision on the matter would be made "at an appropriate time."

Waldorf Bringing Seasoned Team to Face Navy Saturday

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

A YOUNG MAN by the name of Norrie West walked into the sports department and began talking about the University of California's Golden Bears.

Norrie is athletic publicity director out at Berkeley and he came to town early to let the "folks back East" know what kind of a team Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf will throw against Navy's Middies at Annapolis Saturday.

From this point on, you're listening to Mr. West:

"Most of the people out in California think that we ought to get into the Rose Bowl this year. It looks as if the race will be between us and Oregon. But you can never count UCLA and USC out in advance.

"Waldorf did a great job for us last year in his first season at California, losing only one game. He's taught the kids the solid blocking and tackling that made Waldorf's Northwestern teams so hard to beat in the Big Nine.

"He's bringing 37 men east for the Navy game. That's all the coast conference allows on trips.

"Twenty-six of our players are lettermen so the team that faces Navy will be just about the same as the one that beat the Middies in Berkeley a year ago, 14-7.

"Only this year, Cal ought to be a much better team. When Cal played Navy last fall, Waldorf had spent only a short time with the squad. He didn't know

McNeish Has Brought Fighting Spirit to VPI

His Pet Slogans Pack a Punch

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles dealing with football prospects of the Southern Conference's major schools. Tomorrow: Washington and Lee Military Institute).

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 20 (U.P.). Up here in the Allegheny Mountains, 2100 feet above sea level, Bob McNeish is working like the Trojan he once was, trying to produce a winning football team for Virginia Tech.

The former Southern Cal halfback, who tutored the Naval Academy backs last year, was appointed head coach at VPI only last March, but already Tech folks are hailing him as the best coach they've had since Puss Redd, present alumni secretary.

McNeish has his Gobbler squad of 58 hustling and wanting to play football. Until today, when school officially opened the 36-year-old McNeish had his Gobblers up for a 6:15 morning practice and had 'em back working again at 2:30. They were tired, but they liked it because they like him.

Bob has been in football long enough to know that slogans and pep talks don't score touchdowns, but he believes they help.

One of his pet slogans, the one he has plastered all over the dressing room and in the minds of his players, says:

"Never underestimate an opponent or overestimate yourself. Respect an opponent, then knock hell out of him—with confidence."

As a successor to Jimmy Kitts, McNeish steped into one of the toughest coaching jobs in the country. It's difficult to induce football players to attend VPI. There are no soft courses for the beefy athletes to slumber through.

You have a choice of either agriculture, engineering or business administration and woe is to the athlete who doesn't toe the academic mark.

Then, too, Virginia Tech is a military school. Two years of military study is required. Today's football players don't relish the idea of soldiering in the morning and practicing football in the afternoons. In between time, they attend classes.

Everything is done in the military manner from sunup to sundown. The busy class-room schedules and labs keep students occupied until 4:30 daily and football practice begins then. McNeish has only about an hour for drills eac hday, which is only a few seconds compared to the hours coaches at other conference schools spend with their boys."

It's quite a challenge, but one which McNeish likes. He brought in Staley Pitts from Kansas State to help him as line coach. From Furman comes Paul Sizemore to tutor the ends. Mel Henry, a holdover from the Kitts regime, is tin charge of the backs.

They are the lieutenants who'll help former Lieutenant Commander McNeish prepare the Techmen for a stiff nine-game schedule which opens there Saturday against George Washington which also includes Maryland.

From the squad which won four and lost six last year, McNeish has 28 lettermen back. He'll be asked to field a veteran starting club, but he isn't as deep in reserves as he'd like to be.

Everything Done In Military Way

Out with a pulled muscle last year, but running with the power of a truck is Fullback Ralph Beard, a 200-pound senior from Cumberland, Md. Assisting Beard in the T offense will be sophomore quarterback Bruce Fisher, Tech's air arm.

The running department is in charge of Ray Beasley and Chip Collum, the two regular halfbacks last year. Also around is Sterling Wingo, a blond-headed speed merchant McNeish hopes will run the opposition dizzy. Wingo has been clocked at 9.8 for 100 yards.

In front of what he thinks is a good backfield will be a 200-pound line, all game tested. Tackle Jack Ittner, a 200 pounder from Richmond, bulwarks the line and if McNeish had a few more tacklers like Ittner the outlook would be much brighter.

Bob won't hazard a guess as to how he'll do in his first year as a college coach, but he says: "We'll be bearing down every second. We'll make mistakes, but seldom will we make the same mistake twice. You can depend on that."

Louise Brough, Brown Win Mixed Doubles Crown

Mrs. Dupont, Bill Talbert Beaten Out

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP).—Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Tom Brown of San Francisco, won the national mixed doubles tennis title today by defeating Mrs. Margaret Osborne du Pont and Billy Talbert, 6—4, 5—7, 6—1, in the semifinals.

Mrs. du Pont of Wilmington, Del., and Talbert of New York advanced to the final round by defeating Gertrude Moran of Santa Monica, Calif., and Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, 27—25, 5—7, 6—1, in the semifinals.

The score in the first set of the marathon semifinal was 22—22, Saturday, when it was halted because of darkness. Eight more games were needed today before it went to the du Pont-Talbert combine.

In the final, Mrs. du Pont, who continued in the tourney although her father was killed in a California traffic accident Friday, showed the effects of the strenuous semifinal and was outplayed by Miss Brough.

Despite the tragedy, Mrs. du Pont won the women's singles crown Sunday.

Games followed service in the first set of the finals until Talbert misjudged a lob on game point, and it hit him on top of the head, costing him his service. That gave Miss Brough and Brown a 4-3 lead and they coasted to win the set.

In the second set, Talbert blew his opening service and the new champion ran out a 3-0 lead before Miss Brough's error cost her a service to make it 3-1.

Could Be Roosevelt's Year

Fox Thought His Boys Too Small—But They Won Opener

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

FOOTBALL Coach Phil Fox of Roosevelt is being likened this week to the little boy who bought a nickel's worth of pistol caps and found later that he had been given a valuable load of T. N. T.

Too young, too inexperienced and too small to win, was Fox's appraisal of his team last week. He's not so sure now.

Last Friday night, his little band of Rough Riders exploded with a resounding 8-6 opening game upset over Martinsburg High, perenially one of the stronger elevens in West Virginia.

The eight points and victory were monumental accomplishments in the light of Roosevelt's record of last year. During all of 1947, Riders were able to win only once and score only seven points.

Basketball Coach Herman Littman opines that the Martinsburg win is a good omen. He recalls that the last time a Roosevelt grid team opened with a win was back in 1943. That year, Roosevelt went on to finish second, its best showing in 40 years.

Fox, however, is tempering optimism with caution. "I'll know what we have this Friday after we play Western in our inter-high opener," he says.

On paper, the Riders seem to bear out Fox's original appraisal. Their regular team averages about 155 pounds and 16 years old per man. Six starters are playing tackle football for the first time in their lives.

The only two lettermen are Guard Lou Valis and Fullback Bob Wilhelm. Wilhelm, dashman on the track team, scored Roosevelt's touchdown Friday with a sensational 65-yard sprint through tackle.

Valis and End Charlie Wilson are Fox's keymen. Valis has been one of the league's standouts for two years. Wilson, 170-pound 17-year-old, was named outstanding player of the Martinsburg game although it was the first game he's ever played.

End Weaver Merrian, Tackles Bob Dofflemyer and Holgar Langmack, Guard Hugh Hayes and Halfback Leon Baron are the other regulars who've never played before. Langmack, at 182, is the heaviest member of the squad. Dave Blair, third-string center last year, is the only "experienced" line regular.

The regular backfield consists of John Blair at quarterback, Baron and Dick Heishman at the halves and Wilhelm at fullback.

Hope to Break Even

Friends, With Only 20 Out, Looks to Successful Year

FOR A COACH whose team opened with a 32-13 victory last week, Al Haringer of Sidwell Friends is reluctant to forecast a winning season.

"We're a cinch to have a successful year," he says, "but it's doubtful if we'll more than break even in the won and lost column."

This is only Friends' third year of interscholastic football and it has a varsity squad of barely 20. But that hasn't kept the school authorities from scheduling such bigger schools as Georgetown Prep and Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Friends got the jump on most of the other schools by starting football practice August 25, and caught an untrained Longwood Prep eleven by surprise last Saturday, 32-13.

Only 13 members of the Friends squad have played the game before this year. Evidence of the dearth of material is Haringer's banking on two Venezuelan youngsters to hold down important positions.

His second string fullback is Albert Carnevali, son of the Ambassador from Caracas. Al has never played football before, and barely understands English. But he's comparatively big, 5 feet, 8 inches, and 165 pounds, and he's a willing hustler. So he's an important figure.

His 14-year-old brother, named Gonzales, but called "Hank" by his mates is expected to be a second string guard.

Fullback Tommy Dean, who almost single-handedly carried Friends past two winning seasons, has graduated to Bucknell. So Warren Groome, a center in 1948 and a tackle in '47, is being groomed as Dean's successor. He came through with a 20-yard touchdown run against Longwood.

Other veterans on Friends' team are Center Dick Simpson, End Duff Smith, Tackle Allen Gunn and Guard Jim Mersereau. Gunn at 175, is the heavest player on the team.

Buddy Smith, who transferred from Woodrow Wilson, will hold down the other end slot. Completing the line are Tackle Scott Himstead and Guard Oscar Gottscho. Halfbacks Ronnie McDonald and George Huguely are Friends' two best runners, and Quarterback Charlie Brown is the passer. Punting duties will be handled by Left-footed Nick Meyers, reserve halfback.

Frank Joins Catholic Team

Catholic University's football team got some reinforcement for its air attack yesterday with the return of Billy Frank, a Cardinal mainstay last year.

Billy, just finished with a summer session at N. Y. U., got back in time for yesterday's inter-squad scrimmage. The Bullis Prep squad, with whom the Cards were due to scrimmage yesterday, turned up lame from a hard scrimmage last Saturday and canceled the date. Tomorrow afternoon Chisari's hopefuls will visit the Anacostia Naval Air Station eleven for a practice tussle.

Polio Strikes Football Team

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 20 (AP).—A Springfield college football player was hospitalized with infantile paralysis today; the 50-man squad was quarantined, and the opening game postponed.

College President Paul M. Limbert reported the illness of the player and the isolation of his teammates.

Mrs. Bower Cards 78 to Win Medal

Mrs. A. B. Bower of Manor Country Club topped the field of Middle Atlantic women golf qualifiers yesterday at Congressional Country Club, winning the medal with a score of 78.

Mrs. Bower managed the two-over par figure despite a wobbly ninth hole where she used six strokes on a par 3. But she hit back at par with five birdies, on the second, fourth, eighth, eleventh, and seventeenth holes.

It was an auspicious return to Middle Atlantic competition for the one-time Kentucky and Maryland State champion who had to pass up this event last year in favor of a new addition to the family.

In 1946, she was Middle Atlantic runnerup to Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, of Manor, who finished one stroke behind Mrs. Bower yesterday with a 79. Mrs. S. F. Little, jr., Army-Navy, the current Fort Benning women's champion, also had a 79.

Mrs. Bower recently changed her membership to Manor from Indian Spring, where she once held the women's championship. She passed up the Manor women's championship tournament last week to prepare for this week's activities.

The title flight is composed of 12 Washington area players, the three Baltimoreans and Mrs. Herbert Allen, jr., of the James River course in Newport News, Va.

Mrs. Allen won a place in the title flight by scoring a par four on the first hole in a playoff for the sixteenth position. Mrs. Theodore Peyser of Woodmont, Mrs. G. P. Moore of Army-Navy, and Mrs. George Calvert of Washington Golf and Country Club took fives.

Quantico Wins Navy Title, 13-6 Over Sub Base

Quantico, Va., Sept. 20.—The Quantico Marines came back in the fifth and final game of the Navy's "world series" with a 13-6 victory over the Naval Sub Base from Pearl Harbor for their second All-Navy baseball crown in as many years.

Jim Pope was the winning pitcher, coming into the game in the fifth inning.

The Marines opened with an early lead, collecting one run in the first on three walks, a passed ball and a fielder's choice. Another tally was scored in the second on a walk, a sailor error and a single by Marine Catcher Don Neidringhaus.

The Leathernecks added three more in the fourth when Second Baseman Bob Johnson homered over the left-field fence with two on.

A homer by Shortstop Howard Ivey with one on in the bottom half of the fourth chalked up two tallies on the scoreboard for the submariners. Ivey's clout cleared the right field wall some 350 feet away with plenty of room to spare.

The Navy nine knotted the score at six all in the fifth and knocked Lefty Volk, Marine starter, out of the box with a walk, three singles, and a double by Bob Myers. Jim Pope, coming into the ball game for the Marines, forced the next three batters to pop up and retired the side.

Quantico's big inning came in the seventh when they collected five runs on five singles and a circuit clout with the bases loaded by George Farrell.

Quantico	110	210	502	13	16	4
SubPac	000	240	000	6	8	3

Batteries: Quantico—Volk, Pope (5), and Neidringhaus. SubPac—Duluth, Carpon (1), Quattlebaum (5), Winfield (7) and Potinak.

Porky Oliver Wins Playoff

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 20 (AP).—The man mountain from Seattle, Ed (Porky) Oliver, jammed down an eagle three to win the Tacoma Open golf championship today on the first hole of a sudden death playoff against Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn.

They had posted 69's in an 18-hole playoff.

Victory was worth $2150 plus 50 per cent of the day's gate receipts.

BOXING—From P. 16

Cerdan Goes After Zale's Title Tonight

announced that two young middleweights—Walter Cartier of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and Jimmy Mangia of New York—had been matched for the eight-round semifinal.

Cancellation of the Lesnevich-Walcott bout forced Neiderreiter and his "six millionaire" backers to reduce the ringside price from $40 to $30, and it slowed up the sale of tickets—temporarily, at least.

Neiderreiter said today, "We expect a gate of at least $300,000." Before the cancellation, their objective was $425,000.

The T. of C. will receive $45,000 for the broadcast, which will begin at 10 p. m. (EDT) over the Mutual System, with Russ Hodges and Jay Jackson handling the "mikes." Movie rights will garner about $20,000. Despite those extra revenues, the T. of C. will need a gross gate of about $230,000 in order to break even.

Zale has been guaranteed $120,000. Cerdan late today, after 24 hours of wrangling, agreed to accept a guarantee of $40,000 or 20 per cent of the net gate, whichever is larger. He originally was guaranteed $50,000, but Niederreiter tried to force him to accept 17½ per cent of the net proceeds instead of that flat sum because of the Lesnevich-Walcott cancellation.

Woodcock, Oma Fight Tonight

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—Bruce Woodcock, who was knocked out in training by a punching bag, predicted today he would kayo Lee Oma in his ring comeback tomorrow.

The forecast came through the British heavyweight champion's trainer-brother Bill, as they boarded the train at his hometown of Doncaster for London.

The two clash in an eight-round bout tomorrow night (4 p. m., EST)

Marc Beats Run Bud Run At Bel Air

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 20.—Busy Moose, a 7-year-old mare who has been busy but rather unproductive this year, finally turned in a victory yesterday at Bel Air after nine unsuccessful tries.

Racing in the colors of J. M. Trapnell, Busy Moose came into the finish line a length and a half in advance of R. N. Boerner's Run Bud Run with A. T. Taylor's Thalia Lad third in the field of eight in the Churchville purse.

Jockey Jimmy Rankin, a Navy (South Pacific) veteran, rode his sixth winner of the meeting aboard Busy Moose and now leads the local saddle colony.

It was to the tune of a $28.40 mutuel that the old mare found her speed today. She was clocked in 100 2/5, creditable time for the abbreviated sprint distance.

Busy Moose was strictly a going concern today. She hopped to the front at once and it was a case of trying to catch her the remainder of the way.

The day's second feature., a sprint of five furlongs, went to Barbfoot, performing for P. A. Rothfuss and was the second triumph of the meeting for the juvenile filly. She was backed down to a $3.20 mutuel and was clocked in a minute flat while under the riding of Apprentice Charlie Meyerhoffer.

Barbfoot is a daughter of Bastinado, a sire who was sold for $150 at a Pimlico sale some years back. Since then the one-time stake horse who ran for an $800 claiming price here, has sired six winners and was reportedly sold for $16,000 to a West Coast syndicate.

The Wild Goose Farm's Big Three became the first horse to win twice at the meeting by taking the first race at a $7.80 mutuel with second choice to Mrs. L. O. Rodgers' How Happy. S. M. Ball's Brooke Argo was third in this field of eight.

Favorite players cashed at $4.60 on the second race and there was a $16.80 pay-off on the 2-8 combination in the daily double. Mrs. H. S. Grinder's Ringside Table was the successful favorite while under the handling of Apprentice W. Downs.

Graziano Signs To Fight Apostoli

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Rocky Graziano, former middleweight champion, today signed to meet Fred Apostoli, another former 160-pound champ, at Oakland, Calif., November 17.

Graziano, who lost the title in June when he was knocked out by Tony Zale in the third round at Newark, will have three tuneup bouts before his California battle. Apostoli, making a fine comeback, resumed fighting in 1946 after a four-year wartime layoff. He has been fighting professionally since 1935. He lost his title to Ceferino Garcia in 1939.

YMCA Swimmers Break 2 Records

Washington YMCA swimmers broke two pool records in beating Hanover, Pa., 31-20, in a meet yesterday at the Washington Y pool.

Bill Smith, Dan Goodsaid, Neal Torrest and William Nutter covered the 400-yard free-style relay in 3:53, eight seconds better than the old record of 4:01. District outdoor breaststroke champ Eddie Dezanni was the other record-breaker, swimming the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:30.1. The old mark was 2:42.3.

New Ladies League To Roll September 29

The defunct Metropolitan Women's Major Bowling League has been granted a franchise and will operate as the Capital Ladies' Major Bowling League this year.

The newly named league was rescued from inactivity by the Metropolitan Bowling Operators' Association. It will open the season on Wednesday, September 29.

the players very well and they hadn't caught on to his system."

"TODAY WALDORF has a seasoned team. Cal's successes last season taught the kids to believe in themselves and in 'Pappy.'

"Most of the players are juniors and seniors. If they catch fire, this could be one of Cal's really great teams.

"Lynn wasn't exactly satisfied with our 41-19 victory over Santa Clara last Saturday but we looked pretty good. We could have won by a wider margin, and Santa Clara was all keyed up to beat us.

"But we'll have to hustle to surpass our 1947 record. We were fifth in the Nation on attack, averaging 367 yards per game. We were ranked eleventh by the Associated Press despite our 39-14 loss to Southern California.

"Don't forget that we beat Wisconsin worse than Michigan did. We beat the Badgers at Wisconsin by 48-7, and Michigan beat them by 40-6.

"No, I wouldn't say that we have either a bunch of speed merchants or a powerhouse. What we've got is a team that's big enough, averaging about 214 in the line, with a lot of quickness all around.

"OUR BACKS CAN'T do the 100 in 10-flat but they can run when they get into the open. And Waldorf has given Cal its best downfield blocking in many years.

"Jackie Jensen is the lad that you folks back East may go home talking about Saturday night. He's the kid that broke Navy's attack last year with four pass interceptions.

"He's about 6 feet, weighs 193, and has as much natural ability as any boy I've seen at Cal. He has blond, wavy hair, a lot of color and is the type that comes through for a coach in the tight spots.

"He ran 64 yards for a touchdown against Navy a year ago. Against Santa Clara last week he had runs of 62, 64 and 61 yards. And he's a kicking and passing fullback in Waldorf's version of the "T."

"Jensen also is a fine baseball player. He has turned down several big-league offers. He pitched and batted (.395) Cal to the Pacific Coast Conference title and played on a semipro club that won the State title.

"OUR BOYS are all excited about this trip East. They'll be making Cal history. It will be the first time that a Cal football squad ever has made a trip in an airplane.

"It also will be the first time that a Cal team has played in the East since 1929 when we beat Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, 12-7.

"We hope to show the East what our West Coast ball is like at its best.

"And we've got an attendance record to shoot at. Last year we drew 605,000 in 10 games. The Navy game set an attendance record at Berkeley, approximately 84,000.

"We're going to play Navy again in 1950, at Berkeley, you know, and at Navy in 1951.

"The kids are going on a sightseeing trip while in the Nation's Capital. This is sort of an educational trip, too. But the sight I want to see is this Cal team beating a Navy team that may be one of the major surprises of the season under its new coach, George Sauer."

Harper Ties For Pro Prize At Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 20 (AP).—John O'Donnell, host pro, and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., tied for first place in the pro sweepstakes of the Middle Atlantic PGA tournament at the Commissioned Officers Club today with 67s.

Al Houghton, Prince Georges Country Club, the only Washington pro taking part, finished ninth, with an even par 72.

Harper's amateur partners were Admiral W. L. Ainsworth, E. S. Earley and C. M. Ballard. Teamed with Earley and Ballard, Harper led the pro-amateur field with 61.

Hal (Shorty) Oatman, Naval Base Club, who was monopolized the Mid-Atlantic pro tournaments this year, winning three of five events he's participated in, put together rounds of 34, 34—68, good for second place money.

Scores of pros in sweepstake:
John O'Donnell, Commissioned Officers Club, Norfolk, 34, 33—67; Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., 33, 34—67; Hal Oatman, Naval Base, Norfolk, Va., 34, 34—68; Sam Bates, Cavalier, Virginia Beach, Va., 32, 37—69; John Kelly, Oceanview, Norfolk, Va., 33, 36—69; Lou Shue, Commissioned Officers, Norfolk, 36, 35—71; Jack Isaacs, Langley Field, Va., 35, 36—71; Charles Bassler, Rolling Road, Baltimore, Md., 39, 32—71; Al Houghton, Prince Georges, Washington, D. C., 36, 36—72; Andy Gibson, Country Club of Maryland, Baltimore, Md., 35, 38—73.
Clarence Underwood, Memorial Park, Norfolk, 35, 39—74; Eddie Morrow, Naval Base, Norfolk, 37, 39—76; Johnny Baas, Clifton Park, Baltimore, Md., 40, 36—76; John Zaleski, Fredericksburg, Va., 41, 35—76; Al Jamison, Quantico, Va., 39, 38—77; Bobby Dunn, Oceanview, Norfolk, 41, 36—77; Cliff Spencer, Elizabeth City, N. C., 39, 38—77; C. T. McMasters, jr., Baltimore, Md., 41, 36—77; Buddy Miller, Roanoke Rapids, N. C., 38, 39—77; Jarry Kelly, Glenshealiah, Portsmouth, Va., 41, 37—78; C. Sheffield, Richmond, Va., 38, 40—78; Red Spence, Hampton Country Club, Hampton, Va., 37, 42—79.

Canadians Awarded Title

A dispute over canoe team championships in the President's Cup Regatta was settled yesterday when Chairman William Rogers awarded the Sir Thomas Lipton Trophy to the Balmy Beach Club of Toronto, Canada.

In the runner-up spot was the Washington Canoe Club, at one time thought to be the winner with a point margin of 30-24. Eight of those points, however, were scored in the tilting events, later excluded from the scoring because of the international aspect of the regatta.

Rogers' decision followed consultation with Aubrey Ireland, commodore of the Northern division of the United States Canoeing Association.

Bowling Benefit For Williams

The first of a series of bowling matches to aid ailing John H. "Jack" Williams, veteran Washington bowler and one of the pioneers of the duckpin game, will be held next Sunday night, September 25, at the Brookland Alleys.

Williams, a founder of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress in 1927, recently underwent a leg amputation resulting from severe diabetes complications. The opening benefit at Brookland will be played by the Washington All-Stars and a group of standout bowlers from Baltimore. Tickets are on sale at all alleys.

Hoot Evers In Hospital

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP).—Hoot Evers, Detroit Tiger centerfielder who is leading the team in hitting, was in Henry Ford Hospital today with a lung congestion.

He took part in the first game of Sunday's double-header with Boston but was taken out of the lineup for the second game when he complained of an upset stomach and a severe cold. The club said it did not know when he would be back in uniform.

Clement May Oppose Redskins

Cambridge Springs, Pa., Sept. 20 (AP).—Coach Johnny Michelosen of the National Football League's Pittsburgh Steelers said today Halfback Johnny Clement may see action Sunday against the Washington Redskins at Washington.

Clement has been sidelined with an injured rib, similar to the injury sustained last week by Halfback Ray Evans, former All-American from the University of Kansas. Evans underwent an operation at a McKeesport (Pa.) hospital where his condition was reported good today.

Police 'Fix' 100 Traffic Tickets

Hurricane Lashes At Western Cuba

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

STRIKES—A hurricane struck the Isle of Pines yesterday afternoon in its sweep from the south (arrow) and all western Cuba and southern Florida (shaded area) were in its path

Police last week "adjusted" an even 100 traffic tickets—canceling 11 of them because of diplomatic immunity.

In all, 86 drivers received warnings and 14 tickets were canceled. Two of the other cancellations were for disabled cars and the third went to Walter Anderson, 1908 15th st. nw., who was mistakenly given a ticket for parking in a no parking zone on Saturday when the parking rule was not in effect.

Among those receiving diplomatic cancellations were Paul Blanc of the French Embassy who failed to park at the curb, and Adnan Pachachi of the Iraq Embassy who parked in a no-parking 4 to 6 p. m. zone. Both received tickets last week.

Other diplomatic cancellations went to: Francisco A. Serra, Italian Embassy, parking, 4 to 6 p. m.; Peilin Dei, Chinese Embassy, parked overtime; Emanuel Lamy, French Embassy, failing to park to curb; Thomas Maney, Iraq Embassy, parked 7 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.; Hubert Treuille, French Mission, too close to corner.

Nikolay D. Chuvaldin, Soviet Embassy, too close to traffic sign; Johan Kaufman, Netherlands Embassy, parked in cab stand; Alberto E. Battaini, Argentine Embassy, parked in alley, and J. D. Fay, British Embassy, overtime parking.

16,000 A-Area Lodgers Wait Zone Decision

The future residence of an estimated 16,000 roomers in the District will be decided by the District Zoning Commission at a public hearing at 10 a. m. October 13 in the District Building.

Between 3000 and 4000 homes located in restricted "A" areas of the city have been permitted to take in roomers and boarders under a wartime amendment to zoning regulations, which expire October 1.

William E. Chase, administrative assistant to the commission, said last night that no action will be taken against home-owners under this rule until the hearing is concluded and a decision made on whether the amendment should be extended again.

The amendment, enacted during World War II, to provide emergency hmoushing for the District's war-swollen population, first had an expiration date of December 31, 1947, but was extended nine months.

The restriction covers one-family homes in such areas as that around 13th and Kennedy sts. nw., and the Brookland section in the northeast.

Under the present regulations, two boarders may be accommodated without any official action, and three or four may be taken in after the home owner has applied for a special certificate of occupancy from the Zoning Commission. For homes with more than four roomers, the home owner must appear before the Zoning Board of Appeals for a special permit.

1876 Law Limits Hirings by Navy Just Before Election

Here's a little-known fact—an obsolete 1876 law prohibits the Navy from increasing its civilian staff in any of its many shore establishments within 60 days of a presidential election, unless the Secretary swears an expansion is in the public interest.

Well, the other day Secretary John L. Sullivan formally and officially certified that it was in the public interest for the Navy to hire a "minor" number of additional civilians before the November balloting. He warned, however, in a memo to his commanding officers that the Navy must not violate the personnel ceilings fixed by Congress.

The 1876 law is one of many that should be wiped off the statute books. It leads to red tape and it has long since outlived its usefulness if it was ever effective. Since it was enacted, the Civil Service and Hatch "no politics" Acts were passed.

PEOPLE: George Taylor, former chairman of the old War Labor Board, this week will begin his study of the Labor Department for the Hoover Commission . . . Charles Alldredge has resigned from Government to be Senator Barkley's press relations man. He was an assistant to Interior Undersecretary Oscar Chapman . . . Two retired career employes have put in a bid for the GOP vacancy on the Civil Service Commission . . . Dr. Dorothy C. Adkins has resigned as chief of Civil Service's test development unit to become professor of psychology at the University of North Carolina.

JOB NEWS: An exam for all types of mathematicians at salaries ranging from $3727 to $6235 a year will be announced soon by Civil Service. Applicants will be rated on their education and experience . . . The 800 applicants for the meteorologist test will be examined on October 4 . . . Only 52 people were rated eligible on the recent pharmacist exam for openings in the Veterans' Administration.

ECA: In this column yesterday I criticized ECA's super-tough employe loyalty program. An official of the Economic Cooperation Administration called to make these points:

1. That it's the law which says that no one can be paid from ECA funds who is now or who ever has been a member of any organization which advocates views contrary to the Constitution. Within 90 days after each ECA employe is hired, Administrator Paul Hoffman and State Secretary George Marshall must "certify," in effect, that he is loyal. (More red tape since neither official has the time to do it.)

2. That ECA, State, and other agencies that have employes who are paid from ECA funds have no guide except the Attorney General's blacklist of organizations that might have advocated views contrary to the Constitution. But the official hinted that ECA's policy of refusing to hire any former or present members of the blacklisted groups might be too tough and that the Attorney General probably would be asked very soon for an opinion of the loyalty part of the ECA law.

Map Dedicated To Newsmen Lost In World War II

By The Associated Press

Defense Secretary Forrestal yesterday dedicated a memorial to 45 newsmen and photographers who gave their lives during the war.

The memorial is a large outline map of the world on the west wall of the new press room in the Pentagon Building.

A photograph of each of the correspondents has been hung on the map near the spot where he died.

Forrestal said the sacrifice made by these men is "a manifestation that with a Government like ours the people have to be told—insist upon being told—the truth about the war."

He noted that the list does not include "those gallant men in the Army, Navy and Air Force who also gave their lives as military correspondents."

Among the assembly which included the Secretaries of War, Navy and Air Force, and their chiefs of staff, were the widows of two of the correspondents, Raymond Clapper and Frederick C. Painton.

Two Former Policemen Indicted in Girl Shooting

Incident Occurred In After-Hour Club; Dangerous Weapon Assault Charged

Two former Metropolitan policemen were indicted yesterday in the near-fatal shooting of a 20-year-old girl July 29 in an after-hours club here.

They are Wayne M. Edmondson, 22, of 2210 Shannon pl. se., and Roland H. Holifield, 26, of 4000 Ely pl. se. Both were probationary policemen at the time.

The District grand jury charged both officers with assault with a dangerous weapon. In addition, Holifield was charged with neglecting to arrest Edmondson after the shooting.

Girl Partially Paralyzed

The victim, Miss Dorothy Kilmer of 1314 Fairmont st. nw., was paralyzed from the hips down as a result of the shooting. The incident occurred in the Palm Grove Club, 1601 14th st. nw.

Police said that the two officers left the cafe after the shooting which occurred shortly after 4 a. m., and did not immediately report it. Edmondson made a statement later in which he admitted he held Holifield's service revolver when it discharged "accidentally," it was said.

Both defendants were off duty and in plain-clothes at the time of the shooting. Officials of the club said they had called police to investigate a man who was bootlegging whisky across the street and the two officers overheard the complaint. They went out into the street, returned and were joking with Miss Kilmer when the shooting ocurred.

Miss Kilmer was at one time a part-time hat check girl at the club.

A man and woman were charged with causing an abortion upon a 23-year-old woman. They are John H. Beane, 35, no known address, described as a cab driver who arranged the abortion and Mrs. Helen Jackson, 45, of 326 I st. se., who allegedly performed the operation.

Joseph L. Mason, 34, of 34 P st. ne., was charged with raping a 22-year-old woman on August 25.

Union Member Named to Steam Engineers' Board

Frank J. Nesline, a member of Local 99, International Union of Operating Engineers, AFL, was appointed by the commissioners yesterday to the Board of Examiners for Steam Engineers and Operating Engineers.

The appointment followed a public hearing on whether Harley G. Sanders, an employe of the Washington Gas Light Co., should be reappointed to a two-year term. Several AFL locals asked that a labor candidate be selected for the term which runs to July 1, 1950. Labor already has representation on the electricians', barbers' and plumbing examining boards.

Nesline, who is 51, is the operating engineer at the Shoreham Hotel. He has been supervising engineer for 18 years and resides at 3120 R st. nw.

NOT ENOUGH SEATS—Mrs. Ruth Hedden faces some of the 49 students who yesterday jammed her 9th grade Social Studies class at Arlington's Claude Swanson Junior High School. Thugs Maul Woman, Loot Store of $50

A 50-year-old Washington mother, alone in her peanut store at 1109 7th st. nw., was choked, scratched and thrown to the floor by a thug in broad daylight yesterday as his companion emptied the cash register of $50.

"I told them to take everything, take everything in the store, only don't kill me," Mrs. Visilky Roumel, owner of the O. K. Nut Co., said.

The graying matron reported two Negroes, both between 25 and 30, entered the store about 2:30 p. m. Each bought a 10-cent bag of peanuts. One stood at the door, she reported, while the other chatted with her.

Finally, Mrs. Roumel said, the men rushed her. One scratched her face, clawed at her throat and finally threw her to the floor, smashing her eyeglasses; the other emptied the pockets of her dress of small change and then looted the cash register.

Afterward, said Mrs. Roumel, the two "dragged me" into a back room, warning her to "keep your mouth shut or we'll come back and kill you." Mrs. Roumel, who has three grown sons, said that after waiting a few minutes she came out into the store and fled into the street, crying: "I've been robbed."

She said so far as she knew the men were unarmed. One was about 5 feet 9 inches tall, and wore a black shirt, she said; the other about 5 feet 4 inches, wore a blue shirt and tan sports coat.

Wilson P-TA to Meet

The first meeting of the school year of the Woodrow Wilson School Parent-Teacher Association will be held Thursday at 8 p. m. at the school, Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va.

Arlington Pupils Sit on Floor, Window Sill in Crowded School

The worst case of school crowding in recent Arlington history is forcing students at the Claude Swanson Junior High School to sit on classroom floors and perch on window sills.

The Claude Swanson School, built for 600 pupils, now has 770 enrolled. It had a peak of 720 last winter.

The worst is still to come, W. W. Rich, Arlington director of instruction in secondary schools, predicts, with Claude Swanson due to pick up "about 75 more students" this winter.

In the social studies class for ninth-graders yesterday were 49 students, seven studying on the floor at the front of the room, three more sitting on the window sills.

Miss Lena Wolfe, the school's principal, said ninth-grade classes averaged 42 or 43 pupils; the eighth grade, above 40, and seventh grade, around 37.

Virginia's State Department of Education recommends an average class load of 30 students per teacher.

Overcrowding shows up in the Swanson lunchroom, too. Despite the fact that lunch is served in three shifts, there are still not enough seats to go around. Many students must eat standing.

Miss Wolfe praised the students "for the wonderful cooperation" they have given school officials and teachers in the space shortage emergency.

Tonight, the Arlington School Board is expected to take up the Claude Swanson School space shortage during its regular meeting and propose a remedy.

Before school opened this fall, the board had turned over eight classrooms in the Thomas Nelson Page and Woodrow Wilson elementary schools for the use of 232 present junior high students.

And as an eventual solution to overcrowding, the board is hoping to erect a new junior high school on Lorcum lane, if voters approve a $4,750,000 bond issue for school construction November 2.

Arlingtonians Unite To Back Bond Issue

A council to organize civic support behind the Arlington School Board's request for a $4,750,000 school construction bond has been set up by representatives of seven county civic groups.

Participating in the council are members of the County Council of P-TA's, the Arlington Civic Federation, the Citizens Committee for School Improvement, the Arlington Education Association, the Organized Women Voters, the American Association of University Women and the Better Government League.

Named provisional chairman of the council is Rolland W. Stroebe, 3214 N. 19th rd., Arlington, who is president of the James Monroe School P-TA.

Baptists Stress Evangelization Of Modern Cities

The importance of evangelizing the modern city was stressed last night at the opening session of a city-wide Baptist mission conference at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

The conference is sponsored by the mission department of the D. C. Baptist Convention and meetings will be continued today at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m. at Calvary Church.

Dr. J. Howard Williams, executive secretary of the Texas Baptist Convention, called upon pastors and laymen of 35 Washington congregations to tackle urban evangelization with a "crusade spirit."

Porter Suite Searched in Vain for Will

The Kennedy-Warren apartment of Charles B. Porter, former treasurer of the Times-Herald, was searched in vain yesterday for a will he allegedly executed some time before he plunged to his death last Tuesday from a Clarksburg, W. Va., hotel window.

Permission for the search was granted by Judge Edward A. Tamm in District Court to F. C. R. Ogilby, attorney for Mrs. Sibilla Campbell and Russell M. Bruce, who said they believed Porter made a will naming them executors of his estate. Mrs. Campbell was housekeeper for the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, former owner, editor and publisher of the Times-Herald. Bruce was a Times-Herald employe and clerk for Porter.

Ogilby was accompanied by Register of Wills Theodore A. Cogswell in the search of the apartment at 3133 Connecticut ave. nw.

Request for the search was based on a handwritten paper of Porter's, reading:

"I, Charles Bell Porter, leave all of which I die possessed to Alice Milne and Zena Milne. I would like Mrs. Sibilla Campbell to act as my executrix in the United States of America, and the Union Bank of Scotland in Edinburgh as executor there."

The Misses Milne are believed to be either nieces or cousins of Porter living in his native Scotland.

The Countess Felicia Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson, has asked the court for "limited letters of collection" to protest any papers of Porter bearing on her mother's will, which left the Times-Herald property to seven executives of that newspaper. She is contesting the will.

Welfare Heads Cut 1950 Budget Requests 50%

D. C. Patient Care In St. Elizabeths To Consume Half $14,280,790 Total

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The Welfare Department's 1950 budget estimate, pared down to nearly half the 1949 request, was released by the District Commissioners yesterday.

The department now wants to spend $14,280,900 in fiscal 1950, about $1,400,000 more than this year. Originally they asked the Commissioners to allow it $25,560,220 for the current fiscal year.

Next year's budget contains only one construction item—$185,000 to complete work already begun on a residence for employes and a residence for medical staff at the District Training School.

Half for St. Elizabeths

More than half the total—$7,854,000—would go for the support of the District's indigent insane at St. Elizabeths Hospital. Welfare department administration of the voluntary commitment load is expected to add to departmental duties at the hospital. Predicted is a normal annual increase of 80 patients under District care, at $4.15 per day per patient. A total of 5063 such patients is expected for 1950.

Welfare department heads want to spend $488,480 more for agency services ($3,973,680) in fiscal 1950 than during the current year. Bulk of the increase is to bring the budget standard used in public assistance cases from the 1942 cost of living to the 1946 cost of living level. During the present year, it was upped to within 90 per cent of the 1946 figure by an increase in Federal funds.

District Heads Warned

Welfare Director John W. Tramburg has warned District government heads that the most serious problems for those who must count on public assistance for their existence are "the greatly increased cost of food and clothing, and the difficulty in finding shelter at any price."

At the same time, he said, the District birth rate is rising, bringing twice as many children into the District each year as are reaching maturity or dying.

"This means," Tramburg said, "that our childhood population is increasing at 5 per cent a year, not counting any gain from immigration. At the same time, the lengthening span of life is increasing the number of persons aged 65 by 3½ per cent a year."

Work Scarce for Some

And while general employment remains high, Tramburg points out, "employment is hard to find for handicapped and less efficient workers. No assistance is now given to any fully employed person. The aged, the blind and most of the public assistance cases are too old, too ill too disabled and too much handicapped to compete in the labor market."

Examples of how economic trends in Washington effect welfare operations interlace the department's budget estimates.

At Blue Plains, "more normal conditions" are expected to bring resident population back to 1943 levels, with 450 residents expected this year, and 500 next year.

Some increase in dependency or neglect of children was felt as early as last May as a result of the TB survey.

Boarding Homes Fewer

"The increasingly crowded housing situation in Washington, the numerous opportunities for employment of women, and the willingness of working parents to pay private families more for day care of children five days a week than the board can pay for full time care, have greatly reduced the number of homes willing to accept children for board, requiring greater effort and more time to secure foster homes."

Application Error

Credit Man Fined $200 in License Fault

Mark H. Rossen, an official of the Motor Credit Co., Inc., of 523 H st. ne., has been fined $200 by District Superintendent of Insurance Albert F. Jordan for "misrepresentation" in applying for an insurance license.

Jordan held a hearing August 18 on charges that Rossen had represented himself as an individual in applying for a license as an insurance agent and broker here, when he was actually trading for the credit firm.

The District official, whose hearing was part of a crackdown on the loan firms by License Superintendent Chatham T. Nottingham, dismissed other charges against Rossen for lack of evidence.

Rossen's attorney, William R. Lichtenberg, who represents most of the local loan firms, admitted Rossen had misrepresented himself, but contended it was "not willful" and that he had not profited by the act.

Rossen's license has been suspended by Jordan for the "misrepresentation" and he has been directed to obtain a new license retroactive to the current license year, which began May 1. The fee is $65 and no credit is given for the payment on the suspended license, Jordan said.

The decision is final since no appeal has been entered, he added.

Mistake Leads To Arrest of 3 in Slaying

Three men were charged last night with the murder of John Gant, 55, of 6015 Eads st. ne., who was hit on the head with a brick and robbed of $10 Wednesday night. He died Thursday.

Detective Sergt. A. D. Clarke of Homicide Squad, said last night that the men were picked up when John B. Greenleaf, 37, of 701 60th pl., Fairmont Heights, Md., was inadvertently arrested for investigation by Fairmont Heights, Md., police.

Homicide Squad had originally requested that a known yoke robber with a similar name was wanted for questioning in the case. Greenleaf was arrested and implicated the other two men.

Greenleaf, together with Edward J. Blake, 21, of 611 62d ave., Fairmont Heights, and Leroy Smith, 25, of 701 White House rd., Landover, Md., were charged with murder, Detective Clarke said.

The victim of the incident in 6200 block of Dix st. ne., died Thursday in Casualty Hospital without regaining consciousness.

Dead Baby Girl Found in Ditch In Chevy Chase

The body of a prematurely born infant girl was found wrapped in a sheet yesterday in a ditch at a construction project at Kirkside dr. and Center st. in Chevy Chase, Md. Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, said the infant had been deposited in the ditch less than 24 hours before it was discovered by workmen.

Fringe-Shuttle Debut Draws 17 Autos, 54 Bus Riders

The Washington Post

SHOPPERS PARKED OUTSIDE—Downtown shoppers grabbed the free parking spaces on the first day of the experimental parking plan, and rode the buses into the city. They evaded the parking lots provided for the experiment. The two lots above are at 25th and E sts. nw. One is completely bare, the other has only four cars (arrow), while around them, in the free space, are nearly 50 vehicles. The photograph was made at 12:15 p. m.

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Only 17 cars patronized the District's first attempt at combining fringe parking lots with shuttle bus service yesterday, but sponsors of the plan were undismayed.

The two fringe lots, located near the Municipal Center and the Christian Heurich Brewery, were opened at 9:15 a. m., after a brief ceremony at the brewery lot. During the day five cars entered the brewery lot and 12 pulled into that at Municipal Center.

The Capital Transit Co. buses fared only a little better. The firm reported last night that it had carried 48 passengers from the center lot into town and six persons from the brewery lot. The company made 55 scheduled trips between 8:50 a. m. and 6:15 p. m., using 44-passenger vehicles.

P. Y. K. Howat, head of the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency and principal sponsor of the scheme, said he was not disappointed in the slim first day's turnout.

"We didn't expect very much today," he declared, emphasizing that it would require several weeks for the general public to become familiar with the service.

He said the project started smoothly, otherwise, and that the only "snag" he had noted was the need for three additional eastbound bus stops and three more westbound ones in the vicinity of 7th, 8th and 9th sts. to accommodate shoppers patronizing 7th st. stores.

The first bus left the brewery lot at 8:50 a. m. with no passengers. At 9:15 the first bus left the center lot with only Motor Vehicle Parking Agency officials on board. The runs took 19 minutes each way.

The second bus from the center lot carried only Paul Garbelman, a public accountant of 1617 T st. se., who parked his car at the lot in the 25-cent all-day section, and then took the shuttle bus to work.

A later passenger also used the bus for purposes other than shopping. A George Washington University student boarded the vehicle at 7th and E sts. and rode to his classes. Other passengers were pedestrian shoppers who used the bus to get into the commercial zone.

The bus stops were marked with white metal signs painted with black letters designating "Bus Stop Weekdays Only 9.18 a. m. to 6:18 p. m." Bus Driver Jennings Rodeffer of 325 Oglethorne st. nw. had to explain the project at almost every stop as he was queried by passengers and potential passengers alike.

The parking fee is 25 cents for 5 hours and 5 cents for each additional hour. At the brewery lot, however, several dozen cars parked free all around the log framed, tar-topped lot. Only five entered and paid the fee.

The Traffic Advisory Board of the District, in its first regular meeting since June, withheld judgment on the effectiveness of fringe-shuttle parking until the plan becomes better known.

Juvenile Officer Gets 4 Va. Cases

Cases of four juveniles who, police say, burglarized nine Arlington homes and took several hundred dollars worth of loot were turned over to the Arlington probation officer yesterday, following a hearing in Arlington Juvenile Court.

The boys, three from Arlington and one from the District, range in age from 13 to 15 years. They were picked up at their homes last week.

Arlington detectives picked up their trail after neighbors told of having seen a red setter dog following three youth in that vicinity.

Detectives followed the setter to the home of one of the youths, who admitted his part and implicated the other three.

Police said the boys had broken into the nine homes while the owners were on vacation, taking jewelry, watches, silver and money. All but $100 in cash has been recovered, detectives said.

Wine Delivery Test

A Bethesda judge was pondering yesterday the question of whether it is illegal for a cab driver to purchase liquor, drugs, or groceries on telephone request and then deliver such items to homes at cost.

His dilemma was brought about with the arrest of John W. Hartley, 21, of 4801 North Lane, Bethesda, charged by police with purchasing two quarts of wine for a patron and then delivering them.

Defense Attorney Robert Beall contended yesterday in a Bethesda police court hearing that if his client was guilty, so also are cabbies who deliver groceries and drug store supplies. He said his client had acted only as an agent.

Trial Magistrate Warren Browning took the case under advisement.

Top G-Man Recovering

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover is well on the road to recovery from an attack of bronchial pneumonia, his office reported yesterday. His associates said his condition has improved considerably since Sunday. He has been confined to his bed at home for a week.

Held on Larceny Charge

Robert A. Blankenship, 22, former Washington resident, was held under $10 bail for action of the grand jury yesterday after a preliminary hearing on charges of housebreaking and larceny, in Hyattsville Police Court.

He was arrested in Mount Rainier, Md., September 11 by Pvt. John J. Chop of Mount Rainier police. At the time of his arrest he was carrying a suitcase and two beach chairs allegedly taken from the locker rooms of Kaywood Garden apartments. Police said Blankenship's now has no fixed address.

New School Opens

The new 10-room Flower ave. elementary school in Takoma Park, built at a cost of $210,000, was opened to students yesterday after a week's delay caused by sewer and water-line installation.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county school superintendent, said 443 students enrolled. He said that one-half day sessions would be held the remainder of this week to allow workmen an opportunity to finish cement construction on the school grounds.

Pistol Carrier Convicted

Leslie Matthews, 44, of 1821 Lamont st. nw., was found guilty yesterday in Municipal Court of carrying a deadly weapon. Police said that he was arrested September 18 in the American Cafe, 1500 7th st. nw., when a .32-caliber revolved was found strapped by two rubber bands to his right leg. He was released under $1000 bond for a presentence investigation.

Soap for Streets

Dr. Lawrence H. Flett, New York industrial chemist, last night predicted that "American housewives soon will insist that city streets and sidewalks be cleaned regularly with the new soapless soaps."

Speaking at the first fall meeting of the Chemical Engineers of Washington, at the Officers Club of the Naval Gun Factory here, Dr. Flett said "five pounds of the synthetic detergents is sufficient to clean a mile of city streets."

Dr. Flett, who was a pioneer in the development of the chemical "soaps" in the early 1930's, is director of the ne wproducts division of the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation. He cited current use of the new products "in the mining industry to control dust and in fire-fighting to quench deep-seated fires in paper, cotton and other tightly-packed materials."

Spotlight Sale Set

Adam A. Weschler & Son, auctioneers, 905 E st. nw., have been employed by District Collector of Taxes Guy W. Pearson to sell furnishings of the Spotlight Club, 17th and M sts. nw., on October 29.

The furnishings, valued at about $2000, were "seized" last month by Pearson's aides because the club president, Vincent Grillo, failed to pay $550 in personal property taxes covering the past two years.

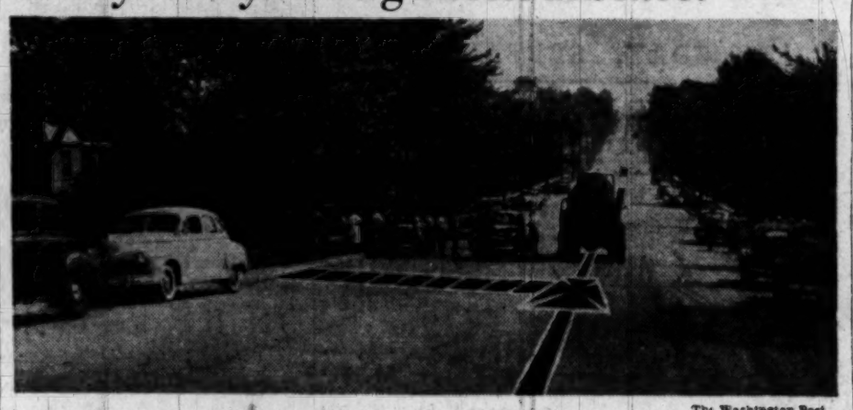
Proceeds above the auctioneer's fees and the tax bill will be deposited in the District government's special trust fund in the United States Treasury.

The Spotlight and two other "after hours" clubs were raided by police last month and charged with violation of local liquor laws.

Dumping Case Forfeit

Frank M. Eliot, 61, of 3704 Quebec st. nw., yesterday forfeited $17.40 collateral in Bethesda Police Court on a charge of dumping trash within 500 feet of the public highway.

Boy, 6, Killed by Truck on Forbidden Trip To Buy Candy During Recess at School



The Washington Post

FATAL VENTURE FROM SCHOOL—Phillip Glover, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt P. Glover, crossed the street from the Richardson Elementary School yesterday, and then started back, lagging behind his playmates. A truck (above) struck and killed him in the middle of East Capitol st. between 53d and 54th streets

A 6-year-old boy was crushed to death under the wheels of a truck yesterday as he was returning to school after a forbidden trip to a delicatessen for candy.

He was Phillip Glover, 301 50th st. ne., a first grade student at Richardson Elementary School, 53d and Blaine sts. ne.

According to police, the boy lagged behind as he and three other youngsters darted back to school across East Capitol st. shortly before 11 a. m. The left front wheel of an empty cement mixing truck crushed the boy's head and chest. Death was instant, Police Capt. William T. Murphy of the Fourteenth Precinct, reported.

The fatality put the toll of District children killed in traffic accidents so far this year to 11, one above last year's total of 10.

The operator of the truck, John Henry Nelson, 34, of 6239 Clay st. ne., was held for action of the coroner. The truck is owned by the District Concrete Co. of Silver Hill, Md.

School authorities had forbidden pupils to leave the grounds during recess police reported the children had sneaked off to the store during the short play period.

One of four children, the child was the son of Hoyt P. Glover, an employe in the Public Buildings Administration. His playmates, police reported, were Clarence Rhone, 7, of 5011 Banks pl. ne.; Ephriam Williams, 7, of 303 50th st. ne., and James Baker, 6, 301 50th st. ne.

Woman Clerk for Navy Killed in Auto Crash

A 23-year-old Washington woman was killed and her companion injured Sunday night in an automobile accident on Route 258, west of McKendree, Md., Anne Arundel County police reported yesterday.

The woman was identified as Blanche Lindsay, 23, of 1919 3d st. nw., a clerk in the Navy Department. Police said she was a passenger in a car driven by Dr. George L. Adams, 43, of New Hampshire ave. nw. Adams was admitted to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore with a broken arm and fractured jaw.

The accident occurred at 8:30 p. m. Anne Arundel police said the car ran down an embankment and overturned.

Bowie Driver Cleared In Auto Crash Death

Alvin Harman, 35, of Bowie, Md., was acquitted on charges of manslaughter and reckless driving yesterday by Trial Magistrate Allen Bowie of Hyattsville Police Court.

Harman had been charged following the death of Julius Kramer, 59, of Bowie, when the latter's car, driven by Harman, struck an electric light pole and turned over on Highbridge road, north of Defense highway.

Harman said an unidentified auto came out at him from a side road and he recalled nothing more until the crash. He was fined $1 for not having his driving permit with him at the time of the accident.

Rookie Policeman Found Guilty of Improper Conduct

A police trial board has found Pvt. George A. Williams, 22-year-old vice squad policeman, guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and has recommended his dismissal from the force.

The unanimous board decision was announced yesterday by Inspector Milton D. Smith, board chairman, following a hearing Friday at which Private Williams, 4427 Quarles st. ne., denied charges that he had committed an indecent act in an alley in the 1300 block of New York ave. nw.

Private Williams was suspended by order of Acting Superintendent Floyd A. Truscott after he was picked up by a scout car patrolman at 9 p. m., August 19, in the alley. He was turned over to night inspectors at police headquarters. Police officials refused to comment on the case.

Hotels May Soon Provide Baby-Sitters and Nurseries

When the Joneses head out for vacationland next year, they may find themselves minus one big headache: what to do with junior.

Hotels across the country may shortly be featuring baby-sitters and nurseries, the American Hotel Association's thirty-seventh annual convention was told here yesterday, so that the Mrs. and her spouse, too, can sneak off for some evening play without worrying about the offspring.

Edward A. Collier, public relations counsel for the AHA, reported that "with travel expected to reach an all-time high next summer, American hotels are going all out in their effort to provide every possible convenience for the motor traveler."

Later, at a luncheon at Hotel Statler, Fred J. Walters, jr., vice president of Hotpoint, Inc., an affiliate of General Electric Co., urged the delegates to try to "supply" their employes "wants." Primary worker-goals, he said, include good pay, good working conditions, good bosses, steady work and a chance to get ahead."

Garth Cate, director of the travel and trade department for the Scripps-Howard newspapers, advised the hotel representatives to "hold the line on prices" because "travel is now in competition for dollars that are fewer in number and have less purchasing power."

He recommended that the people be "educated" to know that every month of the year is a good time to travel. He pointed out that if "steadily increasing fixed charges are to be met, and anything left for management and stockholders, you must have a higher average daily use of your facilities."

Women delegates and guests attended a fashion show at Hotel Shoreham in the afternoon; in the evening members were feted at a party. Some 1000 persons are attending the four-day conclave.

General Bradley Sends Greetings To Third Infantry

Gen. Omar M. Bradley, Chief of Staff, yesterday sent greetings to the Third (Old Guard) Infantry Regiment, which today celebrates "Organization Day."

Bradley described the regiment as "singularly revered" and said he takes "great pride in extending the soldierly salute of men in the Army everywhere."

An all-day program, featuring exhibitions and entertainment, will be held at Fort Myer, Va., and at Fort Lesley J. McNair in Washington. A retreat parade at Fort Myer will be reviewed by Col. James V. Cole, regimental commander.

The occassion will mark the 102d anniversary of the Battle of Monterrey in which the Third Regiment led in the assault and capture of the strategic Mexican fort.

Evening activities start at 8:30 o'clock with a buffet supper and dance at Fort McNair's Recreation No. 1. Government girls and students who have been invited to participate in festivities may call COlumbia 0735 for free transportation to the military posts.

Suspended Term Given Fugitive From Road Gang

John Gardner, 36, of Onancock, Va., was given a one-year suspended sentence yesterday in Fairfax County Circuit Court for escaping from a Virginia State prison camp.

Indicted by the grand jury yesterday, Gardner admitted escaping from Camp No. 30 in Fairfax County July 19 while working with a road gang. He had served one year of a five-year sentence for burglary.

Others indicted yesterday and the charges were:

Grand larceny—Floyd C. Gordon, 24, Elkton, Va.; Millard F. Burgess, 60, Manassas, Va.

Housebreaking—James E. Spicer, 31, Allegheny ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Forgery—Robert R. Wright, 22, RFD 5, Alexandria.

Arson—David Eberly, 34, RFD 5, Alexandria.

Leaving the scene of an accident—Otis Deavers, 23, RFD 1, Annandale, Va.

Candler H. Hoffman

Funeral services for Candler H. Hoffman, 40, a Hyattsville electrical appliance dealer, will be held at 2 p. m. today in the First Methodist Church, Hyattsville. Burial will be in the National Capitol Memorial Park Cemetery, Muirkirk, Md.

Mr. Hoffman, who died Sunday morning at George Washington University Hospital, was past president of the Hyattsville Business Association. The Washington Post Monday erroneously called him a former president of the Hyattsville Building Association. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Mr. Hoffman, who lived at 5602 39th ave., Hyattsville, leaves his wife, two daughters, his father, and a sister.

Prince Georges Puts Two Grades on Shifts

Two Prince Georges County schools will put their first and second grades on a double-shift system Wednesday, G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of the county schools, said yesterday.

The two schools, Mount Rainier and Ager Road Elementary, will use the shift system to care for unusually large enrollments in the two grades.

Giannini Improves

L. Mario Giannini, president of the Bank of America, who has been under treatment in Doctors' Hospital here for a week, is much improved. Dr. Thomas Bradley, his physician, said the banker will be able to leave the hospital Wednesday.

Gala Luncheon Shows Open Washington's Autumn Fashion Parade

By Peggy Preston

FALL has overtaken Washington despite the sunny wiles of the weatherman. Not only does the calendar say so (first official day of autumn), but the fashion show business, a sure barometer of the season, has suddenly gone into high gear.

Yesterday two of the town's top fashion attractions made their respective debuts of the 1948-49 season. One took place in the lounge at the Mayflower Hotel, where informal modeling during the Monday luncheon hour was introduced for the second season. And in the Embassy Room at the Statler Hotel, a festive throng turned out for the Fashion Fair, a Monday noontime feature that is also doing a repeat performance this year.

MISS PRESTON

The luncheon audience at the Statler was liberally sprinkled with important names and not a few had a Mr. before them. Proof, we hope, that the male of the species has finally decided to admit a fashion show is as important as, say, a ball game.

Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson, wife of the Postmaster General, was guest of honor. Around the runway we noted Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister; Mrs. Robert Guggenhem, seated at her usual table with Mrs. Robert Schenck. Miss Bertha Joseph, another "regular" at the Fashion Fair, was on hand, and at another table was Douglas Hatch.

Also present were Mrs. Thomas Burke, Baroness Constantine de Stackelberg, Mrs. Effingham L. Townsend, Mrs. Charles Thomas Claggett, jr., Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. Blake Clark and others.

The young, young set was represented by little Barbara Walker, daughter of Mrs. Burdette Fitch. Barbara, who has modeled in a couple of small fry fashion shows herself, won a prize for being the young lady present with the longest hair. Her blond locks measured 21 inches!

"Just in time," said Barbara. "I'm going to cut my hair tomorrow."

THE importance of the whole range of gray and brown tones in this winter's fashion picture was pointed up in the Mayflower show. There were suits and coats done in a tone called London Fog, which appeared to melt into the color of the beaver with which the costumes were trimmed. Another new note was the identical color of costume hat, presenting a monotone effect which makes an ideal background for elegant furs and jewels.

Jewels, in fact, were the high lights of the showing. All pieces were from the collection of antique jewelry owned by Sabine Heritage of Buffalo, N. Y. If you fancy beautiful, as well as historic jewels, you'll want to see this collection.

Many of the rings, bracelets, earrings and pendants are in their orignal settings, but others have been rearranged or combined with other pieces. Miss Heritage does not hesitate to re-set, for instance, if she believes she can improve its beauty or effect.

Precious stones are included as well as the semi-precious ones such as opals, etc. There are cameos which are several centuries old. One pair of miniature rings, the designs painted on ivory and framed in rubies, once belonged in the family of Marie Antoinette. Other pieces are from ancient jewelsmiths of Russia, Italy, China and England.

The collection is now on display at Jelleff's which also presented yesterday's fashions.

DAME Fashion refused to be downed as the day wore on. Final date on her agenda was the tea given by Mrs. William P. Kent in honor of Miss Ingeborg Longbers, a textitile designer recently arrived in this country from Tallberg, Sweden.

Miss Longbers is one of the founders of the Saterglantan School of Weaving in her native Sweden. Work done at the school seeks to preserve the beautiful colors and quaint patterns of ancient times by adapting them to all manner of practical modern weaving. Some of Miss Longbers original textile adaptations were exhibited at the tea. Included were fabrice suitable for draperis, suits and rugs. There was also several outstanding linens.

Among those present was Mme. Malmaeus, wife of the First Secretary of the Swedish Embassy; and several others from the embassy staff.

Mrs. Kent, whose late husband served for many years in the United States Foreign Service, has long been interested in hand-weaving. An expert at the art herself, she was first inspired by the colorful designs of the Indians of Central America when she was living in Guatemala City.

GOOD, clean lines in a town and country classic wool characterize this dress from Washington's newest specialty shop, Peck & Peck. The top picks up the darkest color of the bold plaid skirt which has mild flair and wide band of self fabric at top

Peck and Peck Opens

Peck and Peck yesterday became the second New York store in a week to open a Washington branch (Franklin Simon opened its doors last Thursday).

This latest addition to the town's list of smart shops occupies small, but attractively decorated quarters on Connecticut Avenue. Its merchandise is largely composed of the classic town and country clothes for which this speciality shop, one of the oldest in the country, is best known.

On display yesterday were ensembles of fine, hard finished worsted, imported tweeds, hand knits and nubby knits; velvets and velveteens, frequently combined with woolens. There were stacks of cashmere sweaters; interesting play and lounge shoes; and an array of novel accessories, including scarves, stoles, costume jewelry, handbags, hats and gloves.

A few dressy costumes, such as black faille dress-suits, and velvet topcoats, were in evidence, but these were the exceptions to the rule. Simply tailored sportswear remains the trade mark of the firm in its newest shop.

Newsworthy items were the combinations of dress, suit, coat and hat, all following a single theme of color and fabric treatment. The green of a wool dress, for instance, was repeated in a hat, suit and coat, matched with a plaid through which ran a stripe of the same color. This is a further elaboration of the "separates" idea in fashion which has been gaining in popularity the last few years. From this collection, it is possible for one to select a matching dress and hat; hat and coat; suit and hat; suit and coat, etc.

This firm, incidentally, has remained a family establishment since it was founded more than 70 years ago. Its officers are A. Wells Peck, president; Frederic Carleton Peck, vice president, and Edgar Wallace Peck, vice president.

Costume Jewelry

The costume jewelry so popular just now is very effective but very apt to stain one's neck and arms if not kept nice and clean. Give it a bath in baking soda and water occasionally, rinsing and drying carefully afterward. This will do away with those greenish marks.

Fashions, Past And Present, To Be Shown

Styles of the past will be shown with those of 1948 at the fashion show to be staged tonight at 8:30 p. m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church parish house, Webster st. and Rock Creek Church rd. nw.

Women of the parish will serve as models for that part of the show featuring authentic antique gowns and jewelry. Jelleff's will stage the modern half of the show.

One of the outstanding costumes from the antique collection will be a hoop skirted taffeta, belonging to the descendants of Dolly Madison and modeled by Mrs. Robert Sayles. The gown is being shown for the last time before being sent to the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

Mrs. Thomas E. Berry will wear a gown which belonged to Mary Odell, daughter of Gov. Benjamin Odell of New York. Accessories will include Miss Odell's engagement ring in its original setting, dating from 1843; her locket, and the handkerchief holder which she carried to state balls.

Master Lee Miller 3d, who is three years old, will also be a model, attired in a jacket which belonged to Mary Odell's son, David Vail.

Another beautiful costume to be shown will be a wool plaid evening gown, once the property of an officer in Gen. Robert E. Lee's command. It will be worn by Miss Jo Cameron. Afternoon gowns of 1880 and 1890 will be modeled by Miss Jane Thada, Miss Laura Lee Guthrie and Mrs. Lee Henry.

Miss Duquette, Ralph Buffington Are Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilson DeWilton of St. Petersburg, Fla., announce the engagement of their niece, Barbara Jeanne Duquette, to Cadet Ralph Maurice Buffington, son of Mrs. Ralph Maurice Buffington of New York, formerly of Washington, and the late Major Buffington.

Miss Duquette is a graduate of Stuart Hall, Staunton, Va., attended Rollins College and was graduated from Katharine Gibbs School in New York.

Mr. Buffington will graduate next June from the United States Military Academy at West Point. He is a graduate of Sidwell Friends School, Washington, and the New Mexico Military Institute. He attended Leland Stanford University before entering West Point.

Miss Soong Here For College Year

Miss Mary Jane Soong, daughter of the Governor of Canton, Dr. T. V. Soong, and Mrs. Soong, has arrived in Washington to enter her third year at Trinity College. Miss Soong makes her home here with an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Shih, at their home on Woodland Drive.

The young student is a member of China's foremost family. Her father is a former Premier of China. Her aunt, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek is wife of the Generalissimo. Another aunt, Mme. Sun Yat-sen, is widow of the founder of the Republic of China, and a third aunt, Mme. Kung, is the wife of a man who has been Finance Minister of China many times.

Dillons Remaining

Washingtonians will be pleased to hear that the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon will remain here for some time to come. It was reported recently that the Ambassador and his wife would leave Washington when the new President of Ecuador, Galo Plazo, took office. However, the latter's refusal of the Ambassador's resignation has been accepted, and there will be no change at the embassy.

Miss Eileen Cecelia Kane, whose engagement to Daniel V. Ascosi, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Kane. Mr. Ascosi is son of Mrs. Andrea N. Ascosi and the late Mr. Ascosi. No date has been set for the wedding

Wellesley College Students to Be Honored at Tea

Young ladies to leave soon for Wellesley College will be honored at a tea this afternoon given by the Washington Wellesley Club. Mrs. Consuelo H. Heurick will be hostess at her home at 3400 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Miss Elizabeth Pratt is in charge of arrangements and those assisting her include Misses Corinne Heurick, Elizabeth Warfield, Evelyn Burr, Marie Vallance, Kathleen Depue, Mrs. Lawrence Tolan and Mrs. Richard Ellinghaus.

Among the new freshmen planning to attend are Misses Anita Adler, Jessie A. Powel, Joan E. Burke, Barbara L. Davis, Susan Dugan, Joan S. Fechteler, Marilyn B. Meuth, Elizabeth A. Osborne, Betty W. Sager, Dorothea J. Widmayer, Barbara J. Meleney, Janice G. Lane, Susan M. Wilson, Jarah B. Ennis, Jennifer Lee and Letitia Ramos.

Home for Winter

Mrs. Charles Goldsmith is again in her apartment at the Westchester after a short trip to New York, following the summer in Atlantic City.

At Seaside

Mr. and Mrs. Max Goodman and Mrs. Barbara Nordlinger are vacationing at the Brighton Hotel in Atlantic City.

Pierre de Gaulle Feted At French Reception

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE MAYOR OF Paris, Pierre de Gaulle, was guest of honor at a reception held yesterday at the French Chancery. In the absence of the Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, who is now in Paris, the French Minister and Mme. Berard acted as host and hostess. Mme. Bonnet was among the guests, chic as ever, in satin print frock and broad brimmed straw hat.

Mlle. Chantal de Gaulle, 18-year-old daughter of the mayor and niece of the famous general, was also a guest. She is accompanying her father on the short visit he is making to this country at the invitation of Mayor O'Dwyer of New York City.

M. de Gaulle is president of the council which governs the 21 arrondissements of Paris. In this country he is known as Mayor of Paris. As he stood in line yesterday to shake hands smilingly with each guest, he looked like the double of his brother, Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Guests were received between 5:30 and 7:30, and afterward a dinner was given in honor of M. de Gaulle by Mme. Bonnet at the embassy.

The French chancery on Belmont street looks every inch a part of France. The floors are spread with thick carpets, the walls are painted soft green and hung with old prints. In the garden, clipped ivy borders small pools and fountains, and there is a swimming pool for use before and after business hours.

Among Those Present

Mlle. de Gaulle was squired about at the party yesterday by Jean Claude Winckler, second secretary of the embassy. The Ambassador of Australia, Norman J. O. Makin, was among the guests, as well as the Ambassador of Greece, Vassili C. Dendramis, the Ambassador of Canada, Hume Wrong, and the Ambassador of Belgium, Baron Silvercruys.

Others included the Charge d'Affaires of Switzerland and Mme. Fuchss, the Charge d'Affaires of the Swedish Embassy, Alexis de Aminoff; the Minister of Holland, Jonkheer O. Reuchlin; the British Minister, F. R. Hoyer Millar; Mrs. Leonard Rist and George McGhee.

Among the embassy staff members and their wives were General and Mrs. Mathenet, the Commercial Counselor, Raymond Dreux, the Counselor, Jean Daridan; the Naval Attache, Capt. Pierre Lancelot, and the new Counselor, Christian de Margerie, and Mme. de Margerie. The latter is the daughter of former Ambassador of France, Andre de Laboulaye.

Mme. Baube, attractive wife of the Counselor, was a guest at the party, and also the First Secretary and Mme. Berard, Counselor Pierre Siraud, the First Secretary and Mme. Flory, the Assistant Naval Attache and Mme. Bouilot, and Mme. Hoppenot, wife of the French representative to the World Bank.

Like his brother, Mayor de Gaulle fought in the resistance movement during the war, but unlike his brother, he was jailed by the Germans and sent to various prison camps. In the First World War, he fought as an officer in the artillery.

Mayor de Gaulle and his daughter are leaving for New York this afternoon, and they will sail for France on Friday. During their short stay in Washington, they are stopping at the Carlton Hotel.

Minister's Wife, Previously Content With Quiet Life, Is in Turmoil Over Husband's Friend of College Days, a Dashing Fellow

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a minister's wife and until a year ago I had led a pleasant quiet life with David, my husband. Then John, his best friend in college days, came to this city to make his home.

Knowing that he was cordially welcome, John visited the parsonage often, and we, too, became quite friendly. I found him very different from my husband, more exciting, active and at times very romantic.

He paid me continuous compliments and in many other ways showed signs of admiring interest; and as a result my feelings are in great turmoil. I have never experienced this reaction to a man before, and I spend sleepless nights wondering what will be the outcome of this tempest in my heart.

John knows of my feelings and feels the same about me, but due to David's position as a clergyman, a divorce would endanger his state in life. How can I go on living with a man whom I know I cannot love? My existence will be dull monotony and misery. Please advise me at once, so that my mind will be at rest.

F. M.

This Dashing Fellow Is Seasoned Trifler

DEAR F. M.: As I get the picture, John is a self-loving, irresponsible scamp, a seasoned flirt and old hand at trifling, who sensed something new in the way of adventure—something refreshing, unusual, from his varietist viewpoint—when he came across a minister's wife whose pulse obviously quickened at his routine blandishments.

In my opinion, he is playing upon your feelings, undermining your morale and psychologically if not literally making a conquest of you, all without serious intentions; and to excuse his failure to cap his irresponsible court with a marriage offer, he is mock-piously arguing consideration for David's position, and will continue to follow this line until he tires of the game.

This I infer from your guarded wording, to-wit: "John knows of my feelings and feels the same about me, but due to David's position, a divorce would endanger his state in life." The sequence of ideas suggests that John is pointing to the allegedly insuperable obstacle; and your next question, "How can I go on living with a man I cannot love?" amounts to a fervid protest of John's pseudo-noble sentiment, which is to say that you wouldn't let concern for David stand in your way.

Woman's at Odds With Role in Life

PERHAPS you are pretty and certainly you are naive; thus you might have great natural appeal for an old wolf; but whatever your type, I daresay John would have waxed gallant as a matter of habit when in your company, so long as you had a vestige of youth and weren't deformed.

Doubtless he appraised you as an agreeable hostess, amiable and personally attractive, worthy of his finest apple-polishing arts, but what precipitated the active flirtation was his awareness of your agitated response to his "romantic" temperament. In brief, he sensed your hunger for the sort of excitement in which he specializes; and in going behind David's back to oblige, he cynically feels that he's behaving no worse than David's wife in the matter.

For advice: In all probability your emotional upheaval isn't sparked by the man himself. Rather I think it is an indirect manifestation of maladjustment to the circumscribed role of minister's wife; also an unconscious repudiation of David's strait-laced clerical decorum. And this is the problem you should tackle, via psychiatric inquiry, in order to integrate your personality and get your future course firmly in mind. M. H.

Expert Advice on Storing Clothes

Pack summer clothes away carefully this fall so that they will be in good condition for wear next spring, clothing specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture remind thrifty housewives.

All clothes should be clean when put away because spots, stains or soil left on fabrics over the months may become "set" with age and difficult or impossible to remove.

Remove pins, metal buttons, buckles or ornaments which might leave rust or other marks on the fabric. Washable clothes should be washed but not starched before storing away.

If clothes are to be packed in boxes or trunks, fold them so that they are smooth and flat with as few creases as possible. Tissue paper helps prevent wrinkles. If clothes are hung on hangers, wooden hangers are suggested because they hold shoulders in better shape and are less likely to leave marks than wire hangers.

Bishop—Bracken

Maraschino Coconut Cake

½ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
3 cups sifted cake flour
3 tsp. Double Acting Rumford Baking Powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup maraschino cherry juice and water, mixed
½ cup coconut
½ cup chopped nuts
18 maraschino cherries, cut fine
4 egg whites

Cream shortening, gradually add 1 cup sugar, creaming until fluffy. Sift 2½ cups flour, Rumford Baking Powder (no alum) and salt together; add alternately with cherry juice. Rumford means easier, quicker beating batter . . . cake that stays fresh longer. Mix coconut, nuts and cherries with ½ cup flour, fold into batter. Add ½ cup sugar to stiffly beaten egg whites, fold into batter. Pour into two greased 8-inch layer pans; bake in a moderately hot oven (375°F.) for 25 minutes. Ice with 7-minute frosting colored with 1 tsp. maraschino cherry juice.

How to Clean a Gilt Frame

How would I clean a gilt frame? E. D.

Because the gilt on a frame is so very thin that ordinary rubbing with a cloth may injure it, use a soft brush to apply a mixture of half-and-half alcohol and household ammonia. After the alcohol-ammonia has remained on the frame a few minutes to soften the dirt, remove with clear water, also applied with a soft brush. Shake off the remaining water and stand the frame on edge to dry.

I have a new, unfinished kitchen base cabinet. The top is a thick slab of birch which I would like to use as a cutting and carving board for meats and vegetable preparation. How would you suggest I treat the top to minimize grease and vegetable stains? M. C. E.

Wash and allow the board to dry completely, then sand any rough spots. When dry and smooth, give it a soaking coat of raw linseed oil. Wipe excess oil off after it has stood an hour. Allowing a day or so to elapse between each application, give it two more applications of linseed oil. Give time for the oil to soak in after each application. This treatment will make the board resistant to water and stains.

I always have trouble turning gelatin out of the molds. If I use a warm cloth on the bottom of the mold the gelatin softens and when it comes out, it somewhat flattens, instead of retaining its shape. I seem to remember hearing or reading somewhere, that by first coating the inside of the mold with salad oil, the gelatin would not stick. Is this correct? Could you give me any further suggestions on the subject? M. D. C.

Yes, oiling a salad mold will help to unmold the gelatin more easily. An oil is recommended rather than shortening or butter, because it does not become so hard when cold. When you are ready to unmold your gelatin, place it bottomside up on the serving dish and place a warm cloth on the mold. Be sure to stay right with it, lifting the edge of the mold frequently to see if the gelatin is loosening. The idea is to warm only the mold and it will probably take less than a minute to do that. Remove the mold as soon as the gelatin slips from it so that the gelatin doesn't become softened by the heat from it. If it is not to be served immediately, place it in the refrigerator. If, when removed in this way, your gelatin does not retain its shape, use ¼ cup less liquid the next time you make it. When you add fruits and vegetables to a gelatin, it is usually wise to reduce the liquid a little to take care of the added liquid from the fruit and vegetables.

My husband sent a white shirt to the laundry with a stick of chewing gum in the pocket. It left a grey stain. Can you advise me as to how to go about removing this stain? The shirt is stained as well as the pocket. C. P. W.

Soak the stains in carbon tetrachloride, kerosene or turpentine to soften them. Rub between the fingers occasionally as they soak to loosen the stain. When thoroughly softened, wash in warm soapy water. If this doesn't completely remove the stain, use a household bleach.

When the telephone rings

Pop hopes the call is from Luther, saying the hunting trip is on for tomorrow. Mom's expecting a Long Distance call from her mother. Sis will go into a tailspin if it isn't Harry, who hasn't yet asked her for a date Saturday night. Buddy hopes it's Joe, whom he was about to call to practice tying knots.

Whenever and wherever a telephone rings, in the home or office, there's a feeling of expectation. For the telephone serves so many different purposes in our daily lives. It helps make appointments, run errands, take orders, meet emergencies. Nothing gives so much for so little. And through the constant improvement of equipment and expansion of facilities, it's becoming a greater value every day.

Amusing, Appealing

'Cactus Jack's' Memoirs Add to Capital Collection Of Shrewd Garnerisms

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THESE days the woods are full of political memoirs. Latest and most amusingly rewarding to an amateur political observer is astringently drawly Bascom Timmons "Garner of Texas," due off the presses next week.

Expanded from a series of five Collier articles, the former Vice President's personal history was compiled in an unorthodox manner. Instead of being based on a mass of personal papers, the veteran Texas journalist put his book together from carefully voluminous notes jotted during a quarter century of friendship with "Cactus Jack" who, unlike most politicians, made no statements or speeches, had granted no interview in 15 years.

Mr. T. had to use this method because two years ago Mr. Garner burned all his papers. He'd kept a record of "all the transactions of my life" and had many offers for them.

"Some wanted to do this and some that with the material," he said. "I didn't want to go through the files myself. They were a mass of yellow and yellowing paper. I needed all my own energies for present activities. So I burned them. Under the circumstances that was a good disposition of them."

But, according to Mr. Timmons, the "circumstances" which impelled Jack Garner to destroy his priceless records were his wife's constant words over their disposition. The late Mrs. Garner, then very ill with arthritis, had been her husband's secretary through half a century of public service and was the only person who knew where "everything" was. Because of this drastic action Mr. T. was really surprised when Garner gave permission to go ahead on the book.

Appealing Trifles

SCATTERED through the book are inconsequential trifles and shrewd Garnerisms we found especially appealing . . . that his wife always called him "Mr. Garner" . . . that he arrived in his office on the dot of 7:30 a. m. . . . that on his too infrequent fishing trips he was the cook and specialized on a dish called "Cowboy Stew" . . . that he could not pronounce "Fiorello," the first name of the late New York Mayor LaGuardia, and called him "Frijole," which means "bean" in Mexico . . .

That the first official vice presidential flag was made specially for him and designed by President Roosevelt, and that, after 8 years of consecutive service as presiding officer of the Senate he owned the largest collection of gavels extant. The smallest fitted in the palm of a hand, the largest, weighing several hundred pounds, needed two husky men to lift it. All are now in the Texas State Museum at Austin.

Shrewd Garnerisms

GARNERISMS we liked included his remark after attending a dinner given by Secretary of State Root, his first act as a member of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee:

"As near as I have been able to figure out, the chief function of the Committee on Foreign Affairs is to attend as many dinners and banquets and do as little work as possible."

When John L. Lewis called him a "labor-baiting, poker-playing, whisky-drinking, evil old man," Garner was enchanted. "There has never been anything that caused me more happiness than Lewis' outburst," he told reporters, "I think the majority of the people will think that anyone Lewis can't control is all right."

"Garner was against President Roosevelt's according United States recognition to Russia. He gave many sound reasons and finished, "But regardless of the sentiment for or against it, I don't think it is right. If this outfit has kept its word to anyone or done anything in good faith I have not heard about it."

Though Garner and Herbert Hoover slugged it out continually, his estimate of the former President's personality is interesting—"I never doubted his probity or his patriotism. In many ways he was superbly equipped for the Presidency. If he had become President in 1921 or 1937, he might have ranked with the greatest Presidents. Those periods would have been more suitable to his talents. I think Herbert Hoover today is the wisest statesman on world affairs in America. He may be on domestic affairs, too."

Today, Jack Garner is 79, hopes to live to be 93 so that at least half of his life will have been spent out of public office. Wealthy, he lives simply in Uvalde, Tex., receives an average of 20 visitors a day, has built some 91 houses, all without what he calls "dood-dads," considers his life's greatest achievement a kindly feeling for everyone—a feeling realized after years of struggling against a weakness for wanting to get even with those who had wronged him.

The Stern Gang

SINCE the brutal assassination of Count Folke Bernadotte, supposedly by the Fighters of Israel or, more informally, the Stern gang, this department has been recapitulating an afternoon at the Wallace Convention spent with representatives of this terrorist group. The Stern gang advertised their presence in the City of Brotherly Love by means of a sound truck placarded, "The Fighters for Freedom of Israel (Stern group) will hold open house and informal discussions on the problems of the Middle East in Room 1302 of the Bellevue-Stratford."

Believing it a gag, we went to Room 1302, found the door locked, but on it a metal sign which read, "If I Forget Thee O Jerusalem." After knocking we were admitted and found two hosts, both dressed in the open-shirt style popular at all Wallace get-togethers.

One was called Gary Geissler; the other, who had come from Jerusalem underground fighting a few months previously, never vouchsafed his name. Both were exceedingly intelligent and while we ate cookies and drank grape juice they told about their organization.

Now that Israel had been recognized as a state, they were an above-ground regular political party, they claimed. On the day of recognition the three Stern gang leaders appeared for the first time together—and few if any of the other members of the fighting corps of 5000 had ever contacted or seen more than two. They told of their literary activities—a newspaper of sorts printed secretly somewhere, even in British prisons, daily since 1941; a book printed on a secret press in a Nairobi camp. They told quite freely of having training units in D. P. camps throughout Europe, of getting some potential members on the Pan York and Ian Crescent, two ships which left Constanza, a Romanian Black Sea port, for Palestine and were stopped by the British.

Saw Violence Necessary

THEY COUNTERED questions on Soviet influence by saying they must first free Israel of the British, then they would take on and expel any Russians. They said that violence was the only means of accomplishing their end—a free Israel.

Meanwhile they wondered whether this department would be interested in writing an article on the "benefits" of underground fighting—the intellectual benefits, they stressed. They would supply the material.

It was all amicable, fascinating to hear. We were given literature. Included was a booklet written by an anonymous fighter killed in the escape from a Jerusalem jail outbreak. The author described the blowing up of a British oil refinery, his capture and trial, a truly extraordinary document.

Finally, they showed me a scrap book filled with stories they had "placed." Many of them were published in newspapers known for their anti-British policy, others in more conservative gazettes.

Legion Auxiliary Officers Installed in Mass Ceremony

Officers of 18 units in the D. C. Department, American Legion Auxiliary, were sworn in at an impressive group installation ceremony held last night in the Department of Commerce Auditorium. Mrs. Julia Florence Dietsche, District department president, and her staff officiated.

Preceding the induction of new officers the national guard of honor with Capt. James C. Clarke in command led the flag processional. Color bearers of the Legion's 23 units participated under the direction of Mrs. Rose E. Perkins and Mrs. Lucille Brown, department sergeant at arms, and assistant sergeant at arms, respectively. Mrs. Louise Williams, past national president of the Legion Auxiliary, was the principal speaker at the event.

Distinguished guests present included Comdr. David E. Kisliuk of the D. C. American Legion Department; Owen C. Holleran, national executive committeeman; Clarence T. Milne, grand chef de gare, 40 and 8; Mrs. Frances Snow, chapeaux departmental, 8 and 40; Mrs. Eva B. Carrico, national pourvour member, 8 and 40, and Mrs. Eleanor Smith, past national president, American Legion Auxiliary. Presenting the Legion officials were Mrs. May Hilleary, distinguished guest chairman, and Mrs. Lillian M. Judd, cochairman.

New unit officers, together with the outgoing unit presidents, were seated by Mrs. Margaret E. Carroll and her committee. Installation arrangements were made by Miss Mabel F. Staub.

The following 18-unit presidents and their entire staff of officers were installed.

Mrs. Alethe Herrmann, National Cathedral Unit No. 10; Mrs. Anna Walter, Henry C. Spangler, Unit No. 12; Mrs. Jeanette Motley, George S. PIN-WORMS CAUSE FIDGETING AND THAT AWFUL ITCH

One of the warning signs of Pin-Worms is a nagging rectal itch which often causes fidgeting and broken sleep, and may lead to even more serious distress.

It is no longer necessary to put up with this trouble caused by Pin-Worms, because science has at last found a way to lick these stubborn pests easily and safely.

Get JAYNE'S P-W at the first sign of Pin-Worms. P-W is a medically sound treatment based on an officially recognized drug element which has proved very effective in dealing with this ugly infection. The small P-W tablets act in a special way to destroy Pin-Worms. P-W means Pin-Worm relief!

GOP Would Cut Social Gains, Democrats Told

Should the Republicans win both Congress and the White House in the forthcoming elections, there will be little if any change in foreign policy. But on the domestic front, the GOP will attempt to turn the clock back to the heydays of private enterprise and unrestricted capitalism. These are the prognostications of S. Stephenson Smith, former associate editor of Newsweek and currently a staff member of New York University.

Guest speaker at the opening session of the Democratic Women's National Council last night, he predicted that the Republicans would whittle down social legislation, sharpen the Taft-Hartley Labor law to make it work against labor; turn over public power plants such as TVA and the Coulee Dam to private companies; sell the public grazing lands in the West to private enterprise.

In addition, he said that the water rights now given to small homesteaders would be put in the hands of big plantation owners. In short, Mr. Smith predicted that the United States Government conservation program would be knocked into a cocked hat. "Off shore tideland oil will be turned back to the States," he predicted.

The speaker said that he was applying the forecasting methods of Henry Adams, famous historian and economist. Contending that Adams was the best political forecaster of the century, he asserted, "Adams called the shots 40 years ahead."

"For example," he continued "Adams in 1903 predicted accurately the date of World War I, the economic crisis of the 30s. He also forecast the crash of Western civilization in 1930 plus the fact that Europe's death throes after World War II would be of great danger to the U. S. A."

Smith said that Adams based his opinion about the crash of Western civilization in 1950 on the outdistancing of technological advances over other forms of human and cultural progress.

Mrs. Walter H. Maloney, council president, presided, and Mrs. Easterline Bell, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

Stresses Need Of Religion In Education

Miss Dorothy Deskin, president of Junior Hadassah, last night took parents to task for neglecting their children's religious education in both the home and synagogue.

Guest speaker at the opening meeting of B'nai Israel Sisterhood, she told the audience "Jewish children today haven't been given as much of the rich heritage of Judaism as they should. Preservation of this rich tradition makes for a wholesome, balanced outlook."

Miss Deskin, who teaches English at Elliott Junior High School, declared that a person who really knows his or her religion will be more tolerant of other people's religion.

"I have been less conscious of anti-Semitism since I learned my own religion well," she explained. "Before I knew my own religion I felt that any discussion of religious views was directed against me. Now I can sit down and discuss religion objectively with others and I know that their differing views are not directed against me."

Mrs. Fred Erlich, sisterhood president, presided and introduced the speaker.

Included on the program, which inaugurated the organization's fall season, was a prayer given by Mrs. Hyman Cowen, Jewish folk songs and Hebrew melodies lead by Mrs. Zipporah Kellman.

FRIGIDAIRE Fully AUTOMATIC WASHER- with "LIVE-WATER" ACTION!

- Fills and empties automatically
- Washes 8 lbs. of clothes in less than a half hour; cleaner, whiter
- Gives 2 rinses with "Live-Water" action
- Spins clothes damp dry
- Self-balancing—needs no bolting down
- Self-cleaning—porcelain inside and out
- Can be hand-controlled for special jobs

Washday work goes out the window when the new Frigidaire Fully-Automatic Washer comes in the door. You just put in clothes and soap, set the dial . . . and forget it! Then in less than a half-hour clothes are washed cleaner, whiter, and spun dry . . . some ready for ironing immediately. That's all there is to it.

SO YOUR NATIVE EX-LABORERS HECKLED YOU FROM THE BUSH, EH, RAK?
YES—THOSE MISFITS I HIRED TO REPLACE THE MOGI TRIBESMEN ARE SCARED TO DEATH OF MY FORMER CREW!
I WALKED ALONE THROUGH THE JUNGLE, YELLING FOR THEM TO COME OUT AND FIGHT—BUT ALL I GOT WAS A SPEAR OR TWO WHICH CAME FROM NOWHERE AND JUST MISSED ME!
YOU HAVE PLENTY OF SCRUMPTION TO BUCK THOSE GUYS—BUT YOU COULD USE SOME HELP TO LIGHTEN THE PRESSURE!
IT'S THAT CANYON AGAIN! YOU WANT ME TO HIRE THE TWO TRAMPS SO YOU CAN HAVE HIM NEAR!

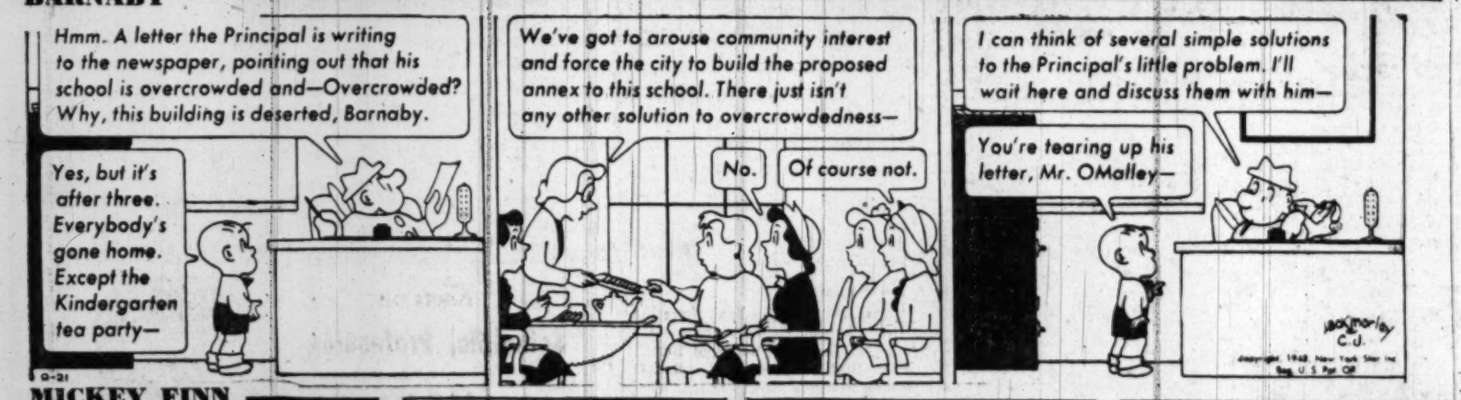
BARNABY



Hmm. A letter the Principal is writing to the newspaper, pointing out that his school is overcrowded and—Overcrowded? Why, this building is deserted, Barnaby.
Yes, but it's after three. Everybody's gone home. Except the Kindergarten tea party—
We've got to arouse community interest and force the city to build the proposed annex to this school. There just isn't any other solution to overcrowdedness—
No.
Of course not.
I can think of several simple solutions to the Principal's little problem. I'll wait here and discuss them with him—
You're tearing up his letter, Mr. OMalley—

Kids Study Definitions; Pop Learns Patience

Elizabeth is a senior at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School this year, and she's taking a course in physics, which she doesn't like.

Dad was trying to find out why, and the best answer he could get was: "Oh, it's those darn definitions: centimeter, mass, energy, matter—I just can't get them straight."

"Oh, come now," coaxed her pop, with what he thought was great diplomacy. "I'm sure you know what those words mean. Tell me, Liz—what's a centimeter?"

"It's one of those fuzzy little insects with dozens of legs."

"Be serious. What's mass?"

"That's where Boston is."

"Energy?"

"What you use to take out spots when you can't find the Carbona."

"Matter?"

"It doesn't."

Pop sighed his acknowledgement of defeat, and turned to the sports page, where he found comforting reassurance in the news that the Nats were still in seventh place.

Something, at least, was still the same in this bright new world.

INFORMATION, PLEASE

Bob McMillen of 1020 19th st. nw. wants me to ask whether anybody has a Rhodesian Ridgeback, because the American Kennel Club knows of no breeders in this country.

Well, that's a clew. (Or is it a clue?) The fact that Bob inquired of the AKC indicates that a Rhodesian Ridgeback is a dog—but you'll never confirm that suspicion in Mr. Webster's masterwork.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four little kittens, 6 weeks old." (MIchigan 4485).

MISCELLANY

Kenneth L. Williams of 10210 Southmoor dr., Silver Spring, Md., thinks that it's time to ask the City Fathers: What happened to the traffic light that was promised for North Capitol st. and New Hampshire ave. "by June of 1948?" . . . Here's an appeal for American magazines of all kinds, for "the working boys of Europe, aged 14 to 18, organized in clubs similar to Boy Scouts." Paper is scarce, and "these youngsters, who revere America," actually wear out any of our magazines they happen to come across. You can send your old copies to: E. H. G. Bardwell, Peace Haven, 23 Chantry Close, Kenton, Middlesex, Great Britain. (He's chief sub-editor of the London News of the Week) . . . You can find almost anything on the streets of a big city, but this one stumps me: A metal identification badge, issued for the forty-sixth annual convention of the American Bankers Association, held here in Washington on October 18, 1920—almost 28 years ago.

FOREST PRIMEVAL

Eleven-year-old David Berkenbilt of 31 Tuckerman st. nw. was strolling through Rock Creek Park the other day, and as he gazed at the creek, this poem suggested itself:

I gaze into the rippling stream,
A nobler work than man's
I see its weary waters and
The Pabst Blue Ribbon cans.

ALL WET?

Lee Heyman of 3221 Connecticut ave. nw. says that if Mr. Truman is reelected, he can take over the writing of the weather forecast for one day, and report: "Dewey mist."

ATTRACTIVE FIELD

A couple of weeks ago, I confessed that I didn't know what the "House of Terrestrial Magnetism" was. Mrs. G. Philip Bauer of 1530 P st. nw. sets me straight.

"The building at 5241 Broad Branch rd. nw. houses the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institution of Washington," Mrs. Bauer explains.

"The purpose of the department is to investigate such problems of world-wide interest as relate to the magnetic and electrical conditions of the earth and its atmosphere.

"Its investigations have included a magnetic survey of the oceans and unexplored regions, and the correlation of magnetic and electrical disturbances with solar and cosmic phenomena, such as cosmic rays."

I can't imagine why anybody would want to get involved in such a complicated subject—but I suppose the scientists would tell us that they're drawn into the field of magnetism by some inexplicable force.

OUCH!

Here's a warning from Julius Lieblein of 2710 29th st. se.: Look out for the poison ivy in Fort Dupont Park.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. H. M. Bell, jr., 1722 N. Quinn st., Arlington, Va.: Your way is neater than mine—but it still results in six thicknesses of paper. From now on I think I'll just use the Army technique and send out my letters unfolded, in huge manila envelopes.

Marian S. Lamont, 2908 Naylor rd. se.: A swell poem, but too long for our limited space. Thanks.

Tom Beesley, Dorchester House: Those Hughes anecdotes never arrived. What happened—did you get a better offer from Leonard Lyons? Or did you ask Barnaby's fairy godfather to mail the letter for you?

ALIAS

P. H. McAllister of 1830 17th st. nw., is intrigued by a question and answer which appeared in our morning contemporary recently.

The question was: "My husband always signs the hotel register 'John Francis Brown and wife.' I say this is incorrect. Am I right? Mrs. F. G. H."

The answer stated that Mrs. F. G. H. was right. Her hubby should sign the register "Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Brown."

But District Liner McAllister wonders whether it wouldn't be less confusing if Mrs. F. G. H.'s husband quit using the name Brown altogether.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—The telephone company soon will be ready to announce a time-saving device on long-distance phone calls. . . . Leo Lindy, the restaurateur, attended a surrealist art exhibit and saw a Dali painting of a steak with an eye in the center. "If one of my customers ever got such a dish," said Lindy, "he'd say, 'Waiter, take back the steak. It has an eye in it.'" . . . One of David Selznick's friends, in discussing his preoccupation with movie-making, suggested that this was an inherited trait, and told of the day Louis Selznick heard shouting in his outer office. He rushed out and was told that the Lusitania had been sunk. "Oh," he said, returning to his office, "with all that commotion, I thought maybe Clara Kimball Young broke her contract."

Mark Connelly, now directing "Story for Strangers," was at the Sheraton one night where he told of methods used to ease the nervousness of actors. He told of Elisabeth Bergner with an ingenue who became tense and artificial as soon as she'd step before the footlights. Before one matinee Miss Bergner placed flowers on every table and in every corner of the set. The ingenue walked onstage, was startled by the unfamiliar flowers, and gasped: "Where'd this forest come from?" She apologized to Miss Bergner for this ad-lib later . . . "Not at all. It was good for you," the star reassured her. "At last you displayed honest emotion."

Harry Lee's novel about the anti-Communist struggle within a labor union, "Sir and Brother," will be out September 30. . . . Chico Marx got into an argument in Hollywood, and challenged a man to step outside. "Okay," said the man, "but remember—there are only three of you Marxes left" . . . Ed Golden, who produced the movie, "Hitler's Children," has bought the screen rights to "As We See Russia," the book by correspondent members of the Overseas Press Club. Golden signed Emmett Lavery to write the screen play for it.

Norman Thomas revealed this story one day: An applicant for a State Department post was asked during the oral exam: "Who is the most distinguished member of your community?" The applicant lives in Cold Springs Harbor, where Henry L. Stimson, John Foster Dulles and Norman Thomas have homes. The applicant replied: "Norman Thomas," and was flunked. Thomas asked Dulles to write to Undersecretary Lovett for a reconsideration of this case. Lovett replied that the applicant failed not because his reply indicated affection for socialism but because, with two other chances open to him, he decided to pick a loser.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Hitler's Ghost at U. N. Session

By Drew Pearson

Today the toddling United Nations tugs up its diapers and starts an uneasy session in Paris. The scene of the sessions is jewel-like Chaillot Palace overlooking the Eiffel Tower.

Eight years ago, Adolf Hitler did a jig in Chaillot Palace after the Nazi army captured Paris. And if by some remote chance Hitler is alive today, he's probably doing another gleeful jig, because his former enemies have been split and divided beyond the Fuehrer's wildest dreams.

PEARSON

Hitler's No. 1 tactic was "divide and conquer." Part one of his basic precept has already been accomplished. World War III would finish off his hopes, and the fear of World War III will be weighing heavily on the shoulders of the young United Nations as it opens in Paris today.

Stalin Gets "Sick?"

Final decision to throw the Berlin crisis into the U. N. was made after the Western envoys met in the Kremlin with Molotov last Tuesday. The Western powers had hoped that a final talk with Stalin might break the Berlin deadlock. That deadlock centered on Marshal Sokolovsky's flat refusal to permit four-power control over Berlin currency. He insisted that Russia must rule Berlin's economics—which also meant Russian control of customs, including all goods arriving via the airlift.

Sokolovsky's obdurance undoubtedly was on orders from Moscow. Yet in Moscow Stalin had previously agreed to the principle of four-power control. So ,to settle this Stalin-Sokolovsky buck-passing, the Western envoys walked into Molotov's offices last Tuesday and asked for another audience with Stalin.

Aloof and grim, hammer-headed Molotov replied that Stalin was sick. He had been taking treatments for the past 10 days outside Moscow, Molotov explained, and there was no telling when he would return.

That ended it. In short, the answer from the Kremlin to the appeal for compromise was a large and definite "No."

U. N. Appeal

The United Nations therefore will now become the stage for the next phase of the Battle of Berlin. The State Department, British Foreign Office and French Quai D'Orsay have kept a careful record on the Berlin crisis, are all set for a White Paper to mobilize world opinion.

Meanwhile, the Kremlin is also reported ready for a "gigantic peace and propaganda offensive" in Paris. They'll demand world disarmament, abolition of the atomic bomb, destruction of all bacteriological warfare equipment, withdrawal of all occupation forces from Europe.

It will all sound extremely pretty, but it won't mean a thing.

Alben Barkley's Humor

Democratic Vice Presidential Nominee Alben Barkley was asked what he thought about Republican campaign promises to "stabilize" the farmer.

"Well, I'll tell you," drawled the Kentuckian. "That one had me stopped for awhile. I lay awake several nights trying to figure out what the Republicans meant by stabilizing the farmer. Finally it dawned on me.

"What the Republicans are planning to do is take the farmer out of his house and put him in the stable."

Paradoxical Maine

The Maine election was one of paradoxes. While the Republicans rolled up a record vote, labor, which generally opposes the Republicans, did likewise.

Maine Labor leaders succeeded in defeating the Tabb Bill which would have outlawed the closed shop. It had been passed by the Legislature and came up on a referendum.

Not only was it decisively rejected, but its author, Foster Tabb, a farmer, was defeated for the Legislature—despite the fact that Maine is generally considered a State of fishermen and farmers.

Merry-Go-Round

Wisconsin's bachelor Sen. Joe McCarthy spent his vacation in the wheat fields at Lefor, North Dakota, posing as a hired hand. He got ten dollars and five meals a day for operating a combine, lost seven pounds even so. . . . Sen. Elbert Thomas, Utah Democrat, is writing a book on the passing of an era. He will call it "The Rise And Fall Of The New Deal." . . . Charged with the unpleasant duty of serving eviction notices, kindly Sheriff Michael Costello of Providence County, R. I., believes in giving hard-pressed families a break. He braves the wrath of landlords, and the warnings of the court to hold up evictions, even pays for newspaper "ads" to find the ejected family a new home.

Uneasy Boss Crump

Tennessee's refreshing young Congressman Estes Kefauver and beleaguered Boss Ed Crump have reached an uneasy truce in Tennessee.

What happened is that Kefauver offered the peace pipe to Senator Kenneth McKellar. McKellar promised to vote a straight Democratic ticket, then went to Boss Crump, warned him not to oppose Kefauver. Crump thought it over and agreed it might be better politics to stay in the Democratic camp. As a result, he promised not to oppose Kefauver but still won't support him.

Kefauver, who has always stuck by his principles, promised nothing.

Notes on Hats

feathers are foremost, shapes: small, forward or large and romantic

Hattie Carnegie's hats are little and perfect . . , youthful and always well-groomed. Here (above) she designs an irregular shape, pulls it to the side, adds a soaring feather to give it poise and eclat.

Lilly Dache, as her name implies, is dashing, vibrant with a French flair for detail and trim. The eloquent hat (center) with its low dipping brim and soft billowy feather aptly speaks for Dache.

Laddie Northridge has drama, artistry and great sophistication. (Far left) his almost scull-cap with bird cluster shows intricate workmanship and creative brilliance.

delle Donne is flattering, feminine and lady-like. This simple felt hat (below) has whimsy and charm in its turned-up back and iridescent clumps of feathers waving over the brow.

fourth floor

The bride should be serenely beautiful, unharassed by a multitude of details. Her wedding, perfectly planned in advance with the help of our Bridal Secretary, Mrs. Suzanne Coolican. Wedding gown, veil, bridesmaids' dresses, trousseau, invitations, note paper . . . even her pictures may be taken in our Trousseau Shop. It all adds up to a glorious wedding day.

coordinator

Madame Henryka Elly Gehring has an outstanding background in the couturier capitals of Europe and America, an outstanding talent for helping you to know the rights and wrongs in your wardrobe shopping. In the privacy of her office, on our Third Floor, Madame Gehring will, by special appointment, counsel and shop with you . . . be it a mink coat or a petticoat you need. Won't you take advantage of our Fashion by Appointment and call Madame Gehring at NAtional 7788?

designs: for young evenings . . . very blithe and modern

In a mood of sophistication, black lace, slim and provocative over a sheath of a rayon crepe skirt.

antoine beauty salon

On our Seventh Floor you will find our Antoine de Paris Salon for our discriminating customers . . . where in peace and quiet, you may have all your beauty needs attended to by our expertly trained staff. Permanents, the new short cut (at which we are especially adept), shampoos, finger waves, facials, manicures, pedicures and wax treatments. We also have an Antoine Salon in our Spring Valley Shop, on the Second Floor, where in addition to the regular departments, we have an expert children's section.

georg jensen incorporated

Gifts of rare distinction are the delicate Royal Copenhagen figurines in famous Danish blue, the pottery and china, the hand-wrought pewter tea and coffee sets from England . . . On our famous Seventh Floor of Gifts. Silver . . . heavy and rich in elegance of pattern. This world-famous silver, made by silversmiths of great skill and talent, in serving pieces and unusual jewelry, is in our First Floor Silver and Jewelry Departments.

greenbrier garden tea room

This restful and newly decorated tea room is one of our joys . . . from the newest of fashions shown every day from 12 to 2 p. m. to the newly equipped and highly functional kitchen, we stand ready to make your luncheon, 11 a. m. to 3 p. m., or tea, from 3:30 to 5 p. m., quick in service, pleasant in decor, and of the highest quality in cookery . . . even our pastry is baked right here. On our Fifth Floor.

Kraus

designs: city suits for the fashionable woman of activities

Notice the elegance of trimming . . . brown broadcloth suit (top left), banded at the hem with soutache braid, the motif only slightly carried to the gently cut jacket, by breast-pocket trim.

The perfect symmetry of his black wool broadcloth suit (center) . . . in its black rayon velvet collar, bib front and cuffs . . . with the nostalgia of long forgotten jet beading and buttons.

Again the sophistication of this green wool broadcloth suit (top right) . . . trimmed, as Kraus loves to do this year . . . here, with just the right touch of leopard.

glassware

From Southern California, where she has her own unique studio, this renowned designer produces glassware so unusual, so breathtakingly beautiful that in itself it is symbolic of the coming-of-age of our American designers. Hand-carved trays, mirrors, picture frames, lamps, bowls, vases, dishes, glasses and candlesticks. Both plain glassware and her new process of hand-painted enamel . . . tiny, softly tinted flower designs on glass. Dorothy Thorpe Shop on the Seventh Floor.

Hattie Carnegie

feminine and flattering way

Observe this slender, softly-cut dress for evening (right). Black silk satin, with low decolletage . . . the cover-up bolero has "neck frivolities" in the mid-Victorian jet embroidery and jet buttons.

The flowing lines of her "center focus" dress retains a crispness of silhouette. In black rayon crepe, with rayon satin waist insert, it has the fastidious Empire air.

designs: in the dramatic manner, bold and decisive

Observe the restraint of this soft brown Samek wool suit (top left) . . . the infinite "wearableness" that comes only from perfection in tailoring. Slim of skirt, with molded jacket and button design.

Enjoy the Cinderella loveliness of this breath-taking ball gown of grey silk taffeta . . . full and feminine as a woman wants her gown to be when she is dressed for the dance.

Or the severe statement of functional, sharp lines in this navy Samek wool suit (top right) . . . relieved only by bands on the sleeves, three pocket flaps over the right hip . . . and again buttons for purpose and design.
